MOSQUITOS AS PEACE MAKERS

THEY REALLY DECIDED
FATE OF CONFERENCE

M. Witte Says Peace Was Concluded in Order to Get Rid of Insect Pest.

(Associated Press.)
New York, Sept. 23.—A Paris dispatch to the World says that the senior Russian peace envoy, M. Witte, laughing, referred while in Paris to Prof. Marten's experience with American mosquitoes, adding, "I can't say that I suffered quite that way myself, but that is due to my constitution. What I found really intolerable was mosquitoes. We made peace in order to get rid of the mosquitoes. I understand now why American national temperament is so nervous. Americans suffer steadily one of the greatest torments known to human kind."
Witte's pro-German declarations and his friendly welcome of the British ambassador, Lord Grey, and his friendly reception of the Russian ambassador, consequently Witte's reception was respectful, but lukewarm.
When questioned about the prospect of signing a peace treaty in France, he said: "I am no longer minister of finance and must leave the details of the present situation. If a treaty is to be negotiated in Paris I know nothing about it."
After his audience with the Czar at Peterhof on Monday and Tuesday, M. Witte is going to one of his country districts in Russia to look after some property belonging to his son-in-law. He will then go to Italy to take a long rest.

ANOTHER RUSSIAN BATTLESHIP FLOATED

THE RETVIZAN RAISED
BY JAP ENGINEERS

More Arrests Have Been Made in Tokio
In Connection With the Recent Riots.

(Associated Press.)
Tokyo, Sept. 23.—The Russian battleship Retvizan, which was sunk at Port Arthur, was refloated by Japanese engineers yesterday.
Many Arrests.
Tokyo, Sept. 23.—Following drastic domiciliary visits of procurators and judges of the Preliminary court yesterday to the offices of the newspaper Niroku and the residences of its editors and other places, 22 arrests were made during last night and early this morning. Among those arrested are two persons closely connected with the Niroku. The others are merely workmen.
It is believed that the charge on which the arrests have been made is that of instigating the recent riots.
WILL REMAIN ON TEAM.

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 23.—It is announced by the Montgomery Baseball Association that all of the members of this season's team, except Brothers, third baseman, and McCoy and Storkell, pitchers, have signed contracts for next year.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE KAISER

TRAINING GIVEN BY MILITARY DEPOTS

WHAT SIR FREDERICK
BORDEN HAS IN VIEW

Good Results From the Operation of Schools of Instruction in the Eastern Militia Districts.

Since he took charge of the department of militia and defence in 1896, Sir Frederick Borden has done much to increase the efficiency of the force, and to remedy abuses which have crept into it. None of the proposals which he has made, however, have such an immediate interest to the members of the different corps in British Columbia as that contained in his statement while here a few days ago that he would establish training depots at Esquimalt similar to those in existence at various points in Eastern Canada.
Up to the present the officers and men have been obliged to obtain their theoretical training at special schools of instruction, instituted at Work Point barracks, and in one instance at the armories in Vancouver. What a great advantage the other system will constitute may be gathered from a brief description of the methods employed at these military depots.
For many years centres have existed at Toronto and London, Ont., at St. John, Que., and at Fredericton, N. B. These are of course in addition to the facilities provided at the Royal Military College at Kingston, and at Quebec. The depots mentioned are primarily for the training of Infantry Officers and Men, and at each a company of the Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry is stationed. A large barracks provides living quarters for the detachment of this regular force, which varies in strength, but which usually runs about one hundred men, rank and file. Each company is officered by the usual complement of commissioned men, and in addition the headquarters for the military district is in the same barracks, so that it becomes the centre of the military life of the entire country of which it is the headquarters.
This company performs the ordinary duties of a permanent force lying in quarters, although the amount of drill they perform is not heavy. Their usefulness to the country at large lies in the fact that they form an instructional force for the training of the militia officers and men, who come there to obtain the certificates of qualification without which they cannot hold a commission for more than a year or a little more.

The practical effect may be best shown by an illustration. A young man in his second year in a small Ontario town, decides to study the subject of military science, and to stand the expenditure which absence from his business involves. He secures an appointment as a provisional subaltern, in all probability in his local company. He goes to annual camp with it, assists the commission officers as best he can, and meanwhile is imbibing as far as he can a knowledge of drill, interior economy and administration. His next step is to make application through his C. O. to attend and if the accommodation is not taken up before he does so, his application is accepted.
Here he falls into the regular work of an officer on duty. He attends several lectures each week by officers of the school, is posted as a supernumerary to the officer of the day, accompanies him on his rounds, attends "office" every morning, and sees justice interpreted in the peculiarly sharp and satisfying ways which military men have in dispensing same. He finds himself in a squad of other officers seeking similar enlightenment, and every forenoon holds a tactical hour, where he, with his sword, manual, sword drill and physical drill. The evolution of the raw civilian proceeds apace until as Kipling has so graphically described, he "learns to throw a chest, and slay his boot," in quite the approved military style. In other words, he soon acquires the indefatigable tone known in the ranks as "savagery," by which is quite a superior article to what might be conveyed in the term to the civilian mind. He obtains police, self-control, habits of command, not only of others, but of himself, and in every way (anti-militarist friends to the contrary notwithstanding) is an infinitely better man than when he entered the school. By and by the drill sergeant calls him out and gives him a turn at mutual instruction. He is taught just how to modulate his voice so that it may carry well, and convey the necessary note of authority, and finally, one of the amusing things connected with these mutual instruction classes is that sometimes an effeminate-looking lad who has never smelt gunpowder will develop a stentorian word of command that would be the envy of a field marshal. He takes his duties alternately with the others, visits the guard, cook house etc., and in short develops all the duties of a regular officer.
The course of instruction continues sometimes for six weeks, sometimes three months, and sometimes nine months, according to the time at the disposal of the pupil-officer. When it is complete he is subjected to Written and Practical Examinations.
He must pass his examinations on military law, on interior economy, on company and regimental organization, etc., and must demonstrate his ability, if trying for a Grade B certificate to handle a company efficiently, and if for a Grade A or field officer's certificate to administer and command a battalion or regiment. Through it all he has been practicing on the soldiers at the depot, and as regular soldiers have a habit of obeying orders literally, which is somewhat disconcerting to the student commander, he has to be very careful that his commands are according to "the red book," which is the soldier's term for the little work which embodies the regulations and orders for the governance of the army and the militia.

If the officer belongs to the cavalry, he goes to Toronto and takes a course with the Royal Canadian Dragoons, and learns to fall off gracefully on the tank back floor of the riding school, before he gets a good, safe and approved seat in the saddle. Infantry officers, too, qualifying for staff duty generally take a course at this school in equitation.
What is true of officers applies also to the men, who obtain certificates as non-commissioned officers, under conditions very similar to those outlined above.
The candidate receives no recompense for the loss which accrues from his business, but the government makes a small allowance to pay for his board, although his whiskey and cigars must be provided out of his private purse.
The effects of the system are most satisfactory. Not only does the officer receive Precise Instruction,
but by daily mingling in the ante-room and at the mess table, with experienced military men, he unconsciously imbibes a great deal of useful knowledge in the unwritten codes of the service. If he does not learn promptly he finds he is penalized by being called upon to quietly but firmly "push the button." A few experiences of this kind make the recollection lively.
On the other hand the district officer commanding and his staff learn the capacity of the men under their charge, with results which are happy for both sides.
The establishment of such a depot at Victoria would have a distinct influence for good in military district No. 11, and local militiamen are impatient to see the new regime put into effect.
DEMAND INFUNCTION.
Esquimalt Waterworks Company Take Bold Step Regarding Goldstream Rights.
Messrs. Pooler, Luxton & Pooler, barristers, on behalf of the Esquimalt Waterworks Company, have filed a writ of summons returnable in 8 days, asking an injunction restraining the city from further alleged interference with the company's rights at Goldstream. Civic officials and members of the city council spoken to this morning by a Times representative absolutely declined to discuss the matter for the present. The basis of the company's charge against the council is trespass in posting notices of intention to apply for water rights. Messrs. E. P. Davis, K. C. and J. V. Bowdell, K. C., are mentioned as likely to assume charge of the city's case should the foregoing lead to the law courts for settlement.

LIGHTHOUSES FOR THE WEST COAST

COL. ANDERSON ARRIVES
FROM NANAIMO TO DAY

He Will Select Sites For Beacons, Look Into Tide Register and Life-saving Station Matters.

Col. W. P. Anderson, chief engineer of the marine and fisheries department, arrived in Victoria at noon to-day from Nanaimo accompanied by Captain Gaudin, en route to the West Coast of Vancouver Island to select the exact site of the several lighthouses to be built there in accordance with the intimation made last year by Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, Col. Anderson will visit Barkley Sound, Clayoquot, Kootenay, North and Quatsino Sound for the purpose mentioned, and expects to spend a considerable time on the work of selection of sites.
While on the West Coast the chief engineer will make an exhaustive investigation of the question of a tidal gauge or registry, something similar to that which was in operation in Victoria harbor until about a year ago. The tidal registry is now considered to be of prime importance by the marine scientific men, and it seems likely that the Dominion government will establish one on the West Coast for noting the ocean movements, and on a scale commensurate with the high importance of that location for observation purposes.
Col. Anderson also informed the Times that the matter of establishing a life-saving station somewhere along the West Coast should have his earnest attention on this occasion. He will ascribe the facts and decide whether a rescue boat of the kind should be made to the government.
Col. Anderson will leave for the West Coast as soon as the D. G. S. Quana is available for the trip. How long he will be absent, or if likely to be absent, he would not say, as the work will be done into thoroughly.

COMMISSIONERS ON A VISIT HERE

THEIR NEXT SITTING WILL BE AT NELSON

Complaints Against Alleged Discrimination By Railways Are to Be Heard in Interior.

Hon. A. C. Kilham, K. C., and Dr. James Mills, of the railway commission, who on the coast could not refrain from paying Victoria a visit before leaving again for the East. Finding a day at their disposal they accordingly came over last evening to this city. They will leave again to-morrow for Vancouver, where they start Monday morning for Nelson, to continue their sittings.
They are accompanied also by the officials of the commission, and J. R. Martineau, of Toronto, representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. The party includes J. Harwell, E. A. Mountain, C. A. Primrose, R. Richardson, of Ottawa, and T. P. Owens, of Montreal. They are guests at the Hotel.
Referring to the fact that no business was found for the commission in Victoria, Dr. Mills says that the people of this city must be very contented, and inclined to live amiably.
On the way East after leaving Nelson, some stops will be made in the North-west. It was found inadvisable to hold sittings on the way West, as the rail from New Westminster was held to be urgent.
For years at the head of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Prof. Mills has not lost interest in the farming industry. The prairie with its ripened grain fields appealed to him, and he says the conditions in that part of the Dominion are most promising.
At Nelson the commission has to deal with several complaints of alleged discrimination. These were gone into in part before A. G. Blair's resignation, but with the latter's retirement from the commission it was deemed unwise, Dr. Mills says, to go into the questions again. It is represented that an agreement between the C. P. R. and the Great Northern with respect to making Nelson a distributing centre for parts of the Kootenay have been the discriminated against. These will come up for argument before the commission.

TRATION OF KANSAS INTO UNION.

THE NEW ST. MARY'S CHURCH R. C.

Almost directly opposite Sample's hall, Victoria West, a modest but very neat little church has been erected, and is now almost ready for services. On Thursday of next week a concert, which has been got up under the charge of Miss Emma Schell, will be given in the church, and very shortly after that it will be open for service. It will be dedicated by Archbishop O'Leary upon his return to Victoria.
About a year ago the parish of St. Mary's was created by the archbishop, and the charge of it given to Rev. J. M. Carter. The whole of Father Carter's was a great one, and was taken thought, less after a full consideration of the requirements and the qualifications of the priest selected. Father Carter belongs to the Marist order, which has done so much for the church in the Roman Catholic church to carry the gospel to foreign countries. The order is specially devoted to missionary work, and wherever the church has its outposts there are to be found representatives of the Marist Fathers.
Within about a year's time the order has shown activity in this part of the world. The St. Louis College on Mason street is now conducted under the charge of members of the Marist Fathers. Up to a few weeks ago Father Carter himself was identified with the teaching staff of the college. The work connected with the church building, however, calling for the full attention he relinquished his position at St. Louis College and gave himself fully up to the work of the parish.
Father Carter is a native of France,

Chairman Boggs Will Refuse to Sanction
Any Expenditure Above the Council's Allowance.

At last evening's meeting of the board of school trustees the old question of the rights of the board to overrun its expenditure estimates of the city council for school purposes was incidentally alluded to. On a proposal to carry out certain repairs on the school buildings, Chairman Boggs gave the board warning that the Mayor had cautioned him against overrunning the estimates.
Some of the members of the school board are inclined to disregard the warnings which the Mayor has from time to time given, and are in favor of going ahead and spending whatever sums it is thought are absolutely necessary. The chairman of the board is known to hold a different opinion to that of some of his

BEARS HELD UP CAR.

(Associated Press.)
Duluth, Minn., Sept. 23.—Street car traffic on Woodland avenue was blocked last night for several minutes by six black bears three large and three small ones. Incidentally a dozen women passengers were frightened when the motorman stopped the car and called to the conductor that there were bears on the track. The women passengers hurriedly gathered together and urged the motorman to go ahead at once. Recently several bears have been shot in and near Duluth.

Trades and Labor Congress.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—At this morning's session of the Dominion Trades and Labor congress a scene occurred when a delegate, Mr. Anderson, of Montreal, proposed a resolution strongly condemning the military expenditures of the Dominion government and demanding that volunteers pay their own expenses. The motion was lost. About fifty other resolutions are being rushed through congress. Considerable time was taken up discussing the appointment of organizers, the opinion being expressed that lack of them in Quebec and other provinces was the cause of slack unionism. The matter was left to the executive. An amendment was added to the motion giving labor men freedom to support their candidate in elections who came nearest the views of the congress. In the absence of a labor delegate, the amendment was carried. The congress was adjourned to Wednesday. The appearance of labor men on the platform of any political party not distinctly a labor one. In a sharp debate the feeling was inclined towards breaking away from political lines. Receipts of the year were $4,700.29 and expenditures $4,091.36.

Salvation Army.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Commissioner Connelley of the Salvation Army has returned to the city from Western Canada. He says the army expects to bring out 10,000 immigrants from the Old Country next year. It is the intention of the army to erect receiving homes at Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver. They will also erect a $50,000 hospital in Winnipeg.

Drunk Carbolic Acid.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Edward F. Taylor, a machanic living at 123 Spadina avenue, died tonight as the result of drinking carbolic acid. He was sitting at the dining table with his wife this afternoon, when he picked up a bottle containing the poison, which his wife had been using for some ailment, and drank the major portion of it.

Condition Unchanged.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—The condition of Rev. Dr. Warden remains unchanged. His doctor says he has hopes of pulling him through, although he is dangerously ill.

On Strike.

Peterboro, Ont., Sept. 22.—Twenty boys, pupils in the Central public school here, today refused to enter a room in which they had been taught, the reason for this act being, as they alleged, the unsanitary condition of the room. It appears that for about a year this room has been in an unhealthy condition by reason of the plumbing, which was defective, and yesterday the pupils held a meeting, at which they decided not to attend school again until the conditions are improved. They assembled at the school grounds today before school and started to the principal their determination to remain away and afterwards paraded the streets. The school authorities have known for some time that the sanitary conditions are unsatisfactory, and yesterday they got an expert from Toronto to report on it. In the meantime the boys were considered to be truant and the inspector will not allow them to return until they have atoned for their actions. The boys, it is said, are supported by their parents.

Inspecting Telegraphs.

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—Mr. Camp, electrical engineer of the C.P.R. telegraphs, is in the city on his annual tour of inspection of the company's Western system. He will be joined in a few days by Mr. Kent, manager of the C.P.R. telegraphs, and will accompany him to the coast. Mr. Camp states that during the past year about 3,000 miles of new wire has been added to the company's lines in Canada, 2,000 miles of which have been strung in Western Canada.

THAT PALE, TIRED GIRL.

"She is in society, in business, at home, everywhere you see her, but always worn and fatigued. She hasn't heard of Ferrero's or she would be perfectly well. How quickly it strengthens—what an appetite it gives—what a glow it brings to pallid cheeks! The nutriment contained in Ferrero's puts strength into any body. Laughing eyes, rosy lips, bright quick movements, all tell of the vitality Ferrero's produces. Thousands of attractive happy women use Ferrero's—why not you? A box of fifty chocolate coated tablets costs fifty cents at any drug store."

PIONEER'S DEATH YESTERDAY EVENING

A. P. Briggs Dies After Very Short Illness—Deceased Had Active Career in Province.

At 5 o'clock last evening A. P. Briggs passed quietly away at the Jubilee hospital, surrounded by members of the family and other relatives, after a short but acute illness, at the age of 62 years. The late well-known and popular pioneer of the province had enjoyed vigorous health up to a recent date, when he suddenly developed symptoms which led to his physicians ordering him to the hospital for treatment. There he underwent a serious surgical operation, which revealed the presence of a cancer in the stomach. He never rallied after the operation, but gradually sank until yesterday, when he quietly succumbed.

Mr. Briggs was head of the firm of Briggs & Chamberlain, and few men were better known in Victoria. He was a native of Kingston, Ont., and came to this province in the prime of youth. He began his career here by entering the steamboat business on the Fraser, holding responsible positions successively on the steamers William Irving, Elizabeth Irving and R. P. Rither. In 1884 Mr. Briggs formed a partnership with James Gray and bought the Pritchard house, which they managed with notable success for some years, when the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Briggs returned to steamboating on the big river. He was then on the steamers Royal City, the Reliance and the Western, making him a general favorite. Five years ago Mr. Briggs formed a partnership with Seth Chamberlain, and began the successful management of the Grouse.

The late pioneer leaves a widow and three sons and one daughter, to mourn his loss. His two brothers, A. Briggs, of the C. P. R. steamship service in this city, and T. L. Briggs, of the river service in New Westminster, are well-known steamboat men.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon from the family residence, 4 South Turner street, and from the Reformed Episcopal church.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Commander of the Mikasa Tried to End
His Life.

Tokio, Sept. 23.—A special to the Jiji from Sasebo says that Capt. Iwichi, commander of the ill-fated Mikasa, made an attempt to commit suicide after an address to the survivors of the warship, by jumping from a window.

He was severely injured about the head and is now reported to be in a critical condition.

It is said that shortly after the destruction of the Mikasa the captain ordered the remaining members of the vessel's crew in a room in the sailors' training school. He spoke briefly and fearfully of the loss of the ship. He said that after enjoying a series of victories he felt the loss of the Mikasa as one of personal responsibility, but he advised his men not to lose heart.

Capt. Iwichi was not on the warship at the time of the disaster, but he boarded the vessel when the fire was raging and did his best to save the ship.

A loss of $200,000 and serious injuries to a number of firemen resulted from a fire at Charleston, W. Va. Four firemen on the roof of one building were carried down to the cellar with a mass of wreckage. All were rescued alive but were badly hurt.

GREAT BAND OF THE ROYAL IRISH GUARDS

Victoria Drill Hall Will Ring With Strains of Unwonted Power and Sweetness
Next Week.

Although the Irish Guards have not been long in existence and up to their formation there was no particular Irish battalion forming one of household regiments, it has yet gained a reputation for itself as the rank and file are concerned, but more especially through the splendid band that C. H. Hassell has succeeded in getting together, and which is declared by many competent critics to be the finest musical organization identified with the British army. This band comprises forty-two of the finest musicians in any military organization in the world. Each has been selected for his special ability on some particular instrument, every one in the band being a soloist. Mr. Hassell, although still comparatively young, has been in the service of a century, during which he has been attached to several leading military organizations; he was selected for the bandmastership of the Irish Guards out of more than 100 candidates, being considered the ablest conductor in the service. His income is larger than that of any other British bandmaster, and his fame extends all over Great Britain and the continent.

It was with considerable hesitancy that Mr. Hassell approached Lord Strathcona with the request to be submitted to His Majesty that the fine band of the Irish Guards should be permitted to visit Canada. Lord Strathcona had some doubts himself as to the success of his mission, but placed Dr. Orr's petition before the proper authorities, who in turn submitted it to the King. His Majesty sending for Lord Strathcona, and after a brief consultation with Col. Vesey Dawson, commander of the Household Brigade, expressed his assent at being more able to accede to the wishes of Canada. When the further request was made that the band be permitted to extend the tour into the United States, the officers of the regiment felt compelled to recommend to His Majesty that the proposition be not entertained. Hence it was that the band a week or so ago was compelled to reject an offer of $8,000 for three concerts in Chicago.

As becomes a band essentially Irish, the programmes that will be rendered here on Monday and Tuesday evenings at the drill hall—the use of which has been permitted by the military authorities of Canada, at the request of the Fifth Regiment officers, and band—will naturally include a number of the popular Irish airs. Bandmaster Hassell adapts his programmes to the tastes of his audiences, classical and popular music being judiciously intermingled. Since the band's arrival in Canada they have had many complimentary engagements through the press. Last Monday they were surrounded in Toronto by an audience of over 25,000, said to be the largest attendance at a band concert in the Dominion. The Victoria engagement opens the British Columbia tour, the plans for which are now open at Fletcher Bros. Government street.

CUT GLASS

It is a far cry from 1800 B. C. Egypt, to A. D. 1905, Victoria, B. C., yet the unknown Egyptian who discovered the Art of Glass Making on the sands of Alexandria was giving birth to a reality which finds its Western Culminating point in the SUPERB collection of CUT GLASS now on view in our show-rooms.

Just as the individual differs from the crowd in those niceties and points of costume which stamp them as correctly dressed, so the table or room decorations are judged by the owner's correct taste in glassware.

We shall be delighted to show you the latest creations in CUT GLASS, such as FRUIT AND SALAD DISHES, FLOWER VASES, DECANTERS, BON BON DISHES, CREAM AND SUGAR SETS and CUT GLASS for the toilet table.

Bridge Evenings, Dinners and Dances will soon claim your attention; nothing gives such a finish to the table as really good Cut Glass.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES
WILL INVESTIGATE

SOUTH PARK SCHOOL
DRAWINGS DISCUSSED

At Special Meeting of the Board Last Evening—Committee of Whole to Conduct the Inquiry.

A special meeting of the board of school trustees was held last evening, when the charge of violating the regulations in connection with the recent examination at South Park school was discussed. The matter was left to the board, acting as a committee of the whole, to conduct an investigation.

Upon recommendation of Secretary Eaton it was resolved to authorize the board to conduct an investigation into the matter for use in the school.

A communication was received from A. J. Puleo, of the High school staff, asking for various supplies. It was received and filed.

The buildings and grounds committee reported that the project of the manual training and domestic science buildings at the Central school, besides a portion of the Victoria West school building, needed remodeling. Tenders for the work were submitted from a number of contractors.

Upon motion of Trustee Jay, it was decided to leave the matter in abeyance until the next meeting.

Trustee Huggert wanted to know whether anything had been done by the board towards the improvement of the teaching staff of the High school by a commercial instructor. He thought it was time for some action. Three months would pass quickly, and something should be done at least before the expiration of that period. The Vancouver board was moving in that direction, and it was important that Victoria should not be behind. For these reasons he moved that the secretary be instructed to investigate the matter and to prepare a report to the board.

Trustee De Hall wanted to know whether any individual now on the school staff was qualified to take up the instruction of such a commercial course as that proposed.

Receiving a reply in the negative, he explained that he also endorsed Trustee Huggert's motion. The matter was carried unanimously.

Chairman Rogers then brought up the principal subject. As is generally known, the school drawings submitted by the South Park school contained examination candidates, the examination of the council of public instruction containing that the Blue had been ruled instead of drawn with a free hand, as provided by the regulations. This question, it will be remembered, was brought up at the last meeting, and a resolution passed providing for the appointment of a committee of architects to inspect the drawings in question and report to the board.

The chairman of the committee, Trustee Marks, explained that for various reasons this course had not been followed. Therefore there was no report to consider. He understood that there had been subsequent developments which made the reconsideration of the motion previously carried necessary.

Trustee Mowat moved to that effect, and Secretary Eaton was then requested to read a portion of Miss Cameron's letter, that requesting that her last year's class be gathered together, the same drawings as those given at the examination be placed before them, and the work done again under the supervision of a capable instructor. She expressed the opinion that the result would be the vindication of her position, by proving the students able to reproduce drawings as good as those presented for examination.

Trustee Mowat thought the board should inspect the drawings as a committee of the whole, in addition to this it would be possible to get together Miss Cameron's class some Saturday morning and have them draw similar designs under the supervision of instructor Marks, of the manual training school.

"If for the whole matter should be dropped," remarked Trustee Jay. He did not think the question of sufficient importance to press to an issue.

At this Trustee Huggert spoke very indignantly. He pointed out that the principal subject of the examination was the drawing of a house, and that the committee of the whole should be allowed to see the drawings of the pupils and the teachers of that institution were to be allowed to read under such a charge. He certainly thought that it would be impossible to allow the question to pass without an investigation. Some such action was the one directly concerned.

Trustee Jay suggested that a committee of the members of the school board be appointed to look into the matter and submit a full report at the earliest possible date.

The appended motion by Trustee Mowat was submitted:

That the board be a committee of the whole to investigate the drawings made by the entrance class of the South Park school which were condemned by Mr. Blair, the said committee to personally examine the work, and also to have the said class, or as many of them as may be desired, under the supervision of Mr. Blair, the director of the committee to be published in the local press.

An amendment was then put by Trustee Jay as follows:

That a committee be appointed, consisting of two members of the board and Mr. Marks, to examine the drawings books in question and make such inquiries as to the work as they deem necessary, and to report to the board, and that Miss Cameron be requested to forward to the board the material decorations obtained by her from the pupils accused.

Speaking to his motion, Trustee Mowat explained that, personally, he was determined to prove the question principally because of Examiner Blair's statement. This, he said, placed 29 or more children under a rather serious accusation of cheating. He could not believe that such a large number of Victorian public school children would be found willing to break the regulations. It was a reflection upon the integrity of the class, while no doubt there might be some "bad" ones in such a number, the entire class would hardly be so lax in principle.

Trustee De Hall did not think the question was being considered in a proper manner. Miss Cameron had stated in her letter something to the effect that she guaranteed the bona fides of the drawings. The point was whether Miss Cameron was sufficiently in touch with the class during the drawing to make such a guarantee. This determined it would be possible by questioning those most directly concerned to ascertain the truth. In his opinion it was ridiculous for the board to investigate the drawings in question and pretend to pass judgment on "truth" and "untruth" lines. To anyone at all expert in drawing straight lines "free-hand" it was not difficult to deceive the jury. Therefore he believed that if Miss Cameron and others were allowed to give their version of the affair before the board a clearer understanding of the situation might be reached. He understood Miss Cameron was within call and recommended that she be invited.

A committee consisting of Mr. Blair, Mr. Marks, Mr. De Hall, Mr. Jay, Mr. Mowat, and Mr. Eaton was appointed to meet with a committee of property owners interested in laying before the transportation committee the necessity for the improvement of the inner harbor, especially that portion above the railway bridge.

It was decided to recommend the expenditure of $150 on repairs, etc., to the city pound, if the funds are available. A committee was appointed to investigate and report in the matter of wooden pipes. The sum of $20 is to be asked for to fit up an office for the market superintendent in the market grounds. The question of opening the Carnegie library for public use was briefly discussed, and a recommendation will be made to the city council suggesting an opening date early in October. The services of an assistant librarian may be required. This being all the business the meeting adjourned.

Cure Your Indigestion With Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and You Will Never Suffer as Jackson Johnson Did.

When you feel that slight discomfort after eating, that gas rising on your stomach or a little pain in the chest, did you ever stop to think that you were in the early stages of indigestion and what the consequences might be if you did not take care of your stomach?

If you didn't just listen for a moment to the story of Jackson Johnson, of North Vancouver, it may make you think:

"I suffered from dyspepsia for a long time and spent a large sum with doctors. Finally I was taken with dyspepsia which became chronic and continued about nine months. I continually grew weaker, till I was confined to my bed."

"Then a person who was using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets persuaded me to try them. I began at once to improve and am now completely cured."

It is easier to cure your indigestion now than if you wait and suffer as Mr. Johnson did. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will do it.

CIVIC UNDERTAKINGS.

Streets, Sewers and Bridges Committee's Recommendations to City Council.

Last evening the committee on streets, sewers and bridges met and transacted a good deal of business.

It was decided to notify the property owners of Kingston and St. John streets, the latter between Belleville and Quebec streets, that permanent sidewalks cannot be undertaken on those thoroughfares unless the property owners agree to move their fences back to the street line. It was resolved that the city solicitor should take steps to cause the encroachment of the property of W. J. Pendray on Belleville street to be removed. It was decided to recommend the city council to spend $750 on the macadamizing of Government street from Cormorant to Bay, $85 for a sidewalk on Simpson street, $78 for a continuation of the sidewalk on Lovers' Lane, $111 on Washington avenue sidewalk and grading, $67 on David street, $150 on Burnside road, $250 on the macadamizing of the Government street from Cormorant to Bay, $250 on a joint road from Harriet street to Washington avenue, the council will expend another $250 on that part of the Burnside road. Also, that $25 be spent in clearing brush on the three-foot sidewalk on Mary street from Esplanade road to the railway station.

A committee consisting of Aids Good, and others, was appointed to meet with a committee of property owners interested in laying before the transportation committee the necessity for the improvement of the inner harbor, especially that portion above the railway bridge.

It was decided to recommend the expenditure of $150 on repairs, etc., to the city pound, if the funds are available. A MILLIONAIRE'S EPIGRAPH.

Although Andrew Carnegie, the millionaire with a not inconsiderable number of estimable qualities, has not completed his life-work, which, as undertaken of his own volition, is to distribute his great wealth and to avoid the disgrace of dying poor, he is said to have picked out the epitaph he would have inscribed upon the stone which will mark the resting place of the "Duke" which is his beloved question: "What in the days when life was strenuous, indeed with Mr. Carnegie, when he was laying the foundations for his vast fortune at Homestead, Pa., a fortune which the labor unions were just as energetically striving to share in to a very limited extent, the millionaire had received very heavily upon all who attempted to resist his imperious will. One agitator who would not be broken in spirit, resisted to the point of meeting exile from the home of the free. He went South, where all did not go well with him, and it is probable that he rued the day he went forth against the stubborn Scot who says he was born to have his own way. But Mr. Carnegie, after he had had his way, did not fear malice. He was magnanimous to those who had passed under the wheels of his chariot. He heard that his antagonist of earlier days was not laying up a fortune for distribution in his declining years. He sent a white-winged messenger to interview the man and to express his wish to set him up on his feet again. The one-time enemy of the ironmaster was manifestly pleased and touched. But he was just as independent as any self-respecting American could be. The struggle was hard, he admitted, and the prospects not bright. He preferred to fight his own battle and to enjoy the fullest satisfaction in whatever success he achieved. However, said the worker, "That was damned white of Andy." And so it is said this explanation is the epitaph Andrew Carnegie is going to have inscribed on his tombstone—after he has satisfactorily disposed of his fortune. But what will Mrs. Carnegie say? What will the tenants and the fans of the Laird of Skibo think? Will not all Scotland be scandalized and the effect generally be painful?

MAN'S DECADENCE.

The dominant figure in this world of weakness and of woe, the creature who by his genius for mastering forces of all kinds has brought his fellow-creatures and the elements through which he lives and moves and has his being into subjection, is, we regret to say, in a condition of rapidly advancing decadence. In his eagerness to overcome and to harness the powers of the earth and the air in his service, he is overlooking that which is really essential and that which his forefathers took particular care to diligently supervise. Man, the lord of creation, is permitting the most valuable part of his estate to pass from his control. Frankly and humbly we express that the subject we have chosen for our afternoon discourse was suggested by the contribution of a writer in T. A. T. (Fales and Talk), apparently one of the few male creatures left with sufficient courage to publicly express his convictions. This literary Ajax boldly claims the truth that the basis of all rule is physical force, in some shape or another. If a man has no means of enforcing obedience to his commands, he might just as well refrain from promulgating them. "The woman can take notice of them or not, precisely as she pleases." From which axiomatic deliverance it will be inferred that the evidence of man's decadence is to be found in the change for the worse in his relations with the woman who "tempted me and I did eat." The bold one—a "bothered bencher," by the way—who unflinchingly proclaims his belief that man should "assert his ancient prerogative," and authoritatively establish his lapsed dominance daringly plunges into his interesting subject by asking, "Should husbands beat their wives?" And he proceeds to reason towards an affirmative answer thus: "Our sturdy forefathers had but one answer to the above question, and that was an affirmative. They chastised their wives for faults committed, just as they chastised their children under similar circumstances, and without thought of being unkindly harsh in either case. The man whacked his erring wife because it was his plain and obvious duty. The wife submitted to be whacked, knowing she deserved it, with a good grace, if a wry face. "And no one questioned either the reasonableness of the practice, or its utility. In fact, as regards the latter, popular sense endorsing popular opinion in the matter abounded to this day. "A woman, a dog, and a walnut tree: The more you beat 'em, the better they get. "Nor is the belief even yet extinct. "Don't yer love me, Billy?" asks the young cooer bride in the story. "Course I loves yer, Liza." "Free who don't yer start knocking me about?" "This is true to life. Only the other day, in a London police court, a young, fresh, woman was asked why "her man" assaulted her. "Because he loves me, sir," she replied, quite earnestly and simply. "Of course, in these days, no man who is a man, is supposed to lay rough hands upon any woman, let alone his own wife.

But what takes the place of the little wholesome chastisement of the days gone by?

"Bickering, nagging, cutting words that hurt more than any whip-lash, studied indifference, neglect. Which is the worse? Let the woman answer."

"In our insistence upon the 'eternity' and the 'divinity' of wife-beating, we have quite lost sight of the other side of the question. How many flighty, feather-headed young matrons have been saved from becoming actual wantons by a timely taste of the strap or the stick in the hands of their justly incensed husbands, to settle down later on into model wives and mothers?"

"Forty or sixty years ago the wife who was caught by her husband wasting his money and her own time in a public-house, was pretty sure of getting a well-deserved 'tiding,' with the result that she was usually sobered up at home. But the sickly sentimentality of the present, taken away from the wage-earner this effective if rough-and-ready method of keeping his wife straight, with the result that, on a Monday, especially, the streets are less sleep-shod throughout the land are filled with frisky women carousing."

"One fact of the matter is that women are in one respect very like children—they need a firm hand over them. For a husband to let his wife 'hang her air' is in nice cases out of ten, to court disaster. It is the man's place to rule, the woman's to obey. Even the prayer-book makes this plain, in the marriage service, and the Bible insists upon it."

"But the basis of all rule is physical force, in some shape or another. If a man has no means of enforcing obedience to his commands, he might just as well refrain from promulgating them. The woman can take notice of them or not, precisely as she pleases."

"And, as a matter of fact, she frequently elects to ignore them; hence marital unhappiness, culminating frequently in actual misery."

"Needless to say, we submit the above 'without prejudice,' being ourselves in the bonds and serving under conditions which imply a state of decadence. There is some degree of comfort in the reflection that women usually skip the dull editorial page."

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE COMMISSION

APPLICATION MADE IN VANCOUVER CITY

Several Matters of a Local Character Were Brought Up For Consideration.

Hon. A. C. Kilham and Dr. James Mills of the railway commission, arrived in the city last evening. They will during the stay in this city Dr. Mills is the guest of David Spencer.

Sitting in Vancouver, Thursday and Friday the commission heard several applications. One of these was made by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and was strongly opposed by the board of trade of Vancouver and Victoria, and the wholesale dealers.

In this application the Canadian Manufacturers' Association applied for the restoration of the old rule, No. 2, covering mixed carloads of freight, as to effect prior to the issue of the Canadian freight classification, No. 12, on shipments between points west of and including Port Arthur to points thereof, and as now in effect between points east of Port Arthur.

W. H. Malkin, of the wholesale grocery firm of the W. H. Malkin Company, Vancouver, appeared before the commission representing wholesale grocers, and protested against alteration of existing conditions. He said it simply placed manufacturers' agents on the same basis as wholesalers.

"In other words," said J. R. Marlow, manager of the transportation department of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, "you want the privileges you enjoy, but you do not wish them extended to others."

Mr. Malkin responded further that if the restoration as applied for was ordered, it would materially affect business such as his.

C. A. Gordon, manager for the Robertson-Gordon Company, testified that his business would be seriously jeopardized if the restoration were granted. Jobbers could combine and ship in smaller quantities and without any place of business could do business from the car.

"Do you understand that the application asks for a restoration of conditions as existing prior to 1903?" the chairman asked.

"Yes," replied the witness. "I was in the manufacturers' agency and commission business, and was then able to benefit by the old conditions. I have been in business here 54 years, and since the present conditions have been in effect our trade has been considerably smaller."

"What about the dealers in smaller places?" Hon. Mr. Kilham asked further.

"I am not prepared to speak for them," was Mr. Gordon's reply.

Chas. Spencer, of Victoria, presented a resolution passed by the board of trade of this city instructing him as delegate to protest strenuously against the application. He said that the Victoria merchants wished to support the Vancouver wholesalers in their protest against the application.

Others appeared and pressed their views.

B. W. Greer, general freight agent of the C. P. R. at Vancouver, said the whole point was that if the rule were restored, business in the West could then ship direct to the interior dealers, without the goods having to pass through the wholesaler.

H. McDowell, representing the Vancouver Board of Trade, presented a memorial complaining of the discrimination against the Canadian shippers in cargo as between Montreal and Vancouver, and New York and Seattle; also as between Vancouver and Calgary and Winnipeg and Calgary, and Vancouver and Montreal, and Winnipeg and Montreal.

Mr. Marlow gave detailed figures in support of this memorial.

"What justification have you for the existing conditions?" the chairman asked Mr. Greer.

In reply, Mr. Greer told how the rates had been reduced from eastern states points, owing to water competition. Mr. Greer filed a copy of the C. P. R. Company's reply, copies of which will be sent to the Vancouver Board of Trade and Mr. Marlow, to enable them to give an answer thereto.

Hon. Mr. Kilham said that in view of the importance of this matter, it should stand over to allow opportunity of reply to those making the application. He said the C. P. R. had been a year in filing its reply.

C. B. Macmillan, K. C., presented an application for a slight change in the route of the E. & N. in the town of Ladysmith. Also an application for the crossing of the E. & N. by the Wellington Colliery Company. The C. P. R. Company was the only company affected, and it offered no objections. The matters were referred to the engineer of the commission.

J. G. McPhillips, K. C., representing certain property holders in North Vancouver made application in respect to the expropriation rights of the V. W. & Y. These had been extended five years, and Mr. McPhillips contended it was a hardship to the owners to have to wait that time, and then be told perhaps the company did not want the land. All that period, industry and development would be checked. If it were so ordered, that the company should give compensation for the land when it was taken over, it would enable the owners to go ahead.

Joseph Martin, K. C., said the intention of the railway was being to, and that a considerable amount of money had been spent in making surveys in the north. It was the intention to connect with the T. T. P., but it was not likely that the line would be built before that road was extended to the coast. He felt Free Sewing Machines—The drawing for a Singer sewing machine, given away by the British Columbia Soap Works, W. J. Poiray, proprietor, took place yesterday afternoon at Watson & Hall's store. No. 445 was the lucky winner. To further introduce and make the public thoroughly understand the merits of White Swan Soap, there will be another sewing machine presented next month. With every purchase of 25c of soap will hand out a coupon which will entitle the purchaser to a chance in this White Swan Soap contest. Some grocers, in the rush of business, neglect from time to time to hand out coupons to their customers, who ought to insist on receiving these coupons, as they are valuable and will bring the absolute free gift of a high-class sewing machine to one of the holders. This month's coupon was obtained at L. Dickinson's, where the sewing machine will be on exhibition in the show window for a few days to come. The name of the lucky winner will be announced as soon as ascertained.

On Tuesday afternoon, however, according to the San Francisco Examiner, Dr. Cummings, quarantine officer, received a dispatch from American Consul Dudley at Vancouver stating that he held an order allowing Maxwell to land at Victoria. The steamship company accepted Maxwell on the condition that should be denied a landing at Victoria the Oceanic Steamship Company would take him back on board the Sierra.

Victoria Hive, No. 1 Ladies of the Maccabees, will hold a special meeting on Monday afternoon at 7 o'clock in A. O. U. W. hall. As the business to be discussed will include the representation of the local Maccabees at the Dominion exhibition, it is particularly urgent that all officers and members attend.

A meeting has been arranged between the committee of the owners of property abutting on the harbor, and committees appointed by the council and the board of trade to decide upon what joint action shall be taken before the royal commission on transportation. The meeting is called for 4 p. m. on Tuesday next at the board of trade rooms.

W. R. Hartley, a well-known Victorian, returned a few days ago after a discouraging attempt to find the place of the Rio de Oro, near Nootka on the west coast of the Island. Accompanied by only one comrade, Mr. Hartley underwent about all the hardships the hardest prospector has any right to expect. It rained some while they were there, and so hard that the creek rose something like thirty feet in the night and carried off their canoe. The craft was caught and brought back by a more fortunate canoe on the same day.

Theatre goers who have not already been to the show there to-night, are taking a very good programme on the boards, one which has filled the house to the doors every night. The first of the three Saturday night performances will commence at 7:30 o'clock, this evening, the two following at 8:45 and 9:45 respectively. Miss Mabel Howard, the Scottish singer, has proved a great attraction amongst lovers of music. Her success in her beautiful serpentine act on the rolling hills is a great success as a time. Dunlop, assisted by Lew Velden, in their sketch entitled "The News Girl," while Yogi, the white conjurer; Onslow and Garnet, and Miss Maudie Hughes all contribute to the programme. Manager Jamieson has also booked a strong bill for next week, the head-liners of which are Miss Lottie Gilson, for some years one of New York's favorite singers, and Signor Du Prez, harpist, a team, which in itself has been a big drawing card on the circuit. They are at present in Vancouver, and Mr. Jamieson has fortunately secured them for the Grand here. In addition there are Cartwright and Lee, in a comedy sketch, which is rated as being one of the strongest ever played on the circuit; Wm. Durant, Chinese impersonator; "the musical chink," and the Mozarts, comedians and big shoe dancers. The illustrated song by Miss Maudie Hughes is entitled "Would You Care?" and the "hispocope pictures," "Summer Boarders."

Both Henry VII. and Henry VIII. were fond of the game, and Charles the Second was an accomplished player.

MILITARY NEWS AND GOSSIP

As the day of the opening of the Dominion exposition at New Westminster approaches, members of the Fifth Regiment display more interest in the preparations for the excursion to the Mainland. This has been arranged, as is generally known, as a result of an invitation received from the management committee of the Royal City Agricultural Association. It was exhibited through Lieut. Col. Hall, the commanding officer, to the entire corps and included passage to and from the show and board, while tickets of the society free of charge. In return the militia is expected to participate in the opening ceremonies and assist in the entertainment programme of the first two or three days by providing military exhibitions at intervals. The proposal, found favor with the majority and, as a result, the regiment will leave for New Westminster by the steamer City of Nanaimo next Saturday, September 30th.

That vessel will go straight to the Royal City. Detaching there the Fifth Regiment will march to Moody's square, where tents will be erected for the accommodation of the volunteers during their visit to the exhibition. They will then disperse for the day, the routine being regulated by the regular military discipline.

On Sunday afternoon, October 1st, at 3 o'clock, the local militia, together with the Sixth Regiment of Vancouver, will assemble at Queen's Park, where drum-head services will be conducted. These in charge of the arrangements have been very courteously given the officers of the Victoria corps the privilege of naming a chaplain for the occasion. As a result Rev. Edson Sharpe will be asked to officiate. The music to be provided in connection with the services should be particularly impressive, as besides the bands of the Fifth and Sixth Regiments the famous Irish Guards' Band will be present to assist in the accompaniment.

On Monday, October 2nd, there will be the march past, in which the two regiments will participate, following which a number of exhibitions are to take place, including those of physical and signal work. The details of the latter, however, have not been definitely settled. Originally it was the intention that the local militia should put on a class in physical drill, but owing to the difficulty in raising sufficient interest among the men to obtain their attendance at drill, the idea was abandoned. In all probability the programme will be filled in by skirmishes, sham-battles on a small scale, etc. Both commanding officers are determined to do everything possible to assist the exhibition management in their efforts to provide ample entertainment for the many visitors expected during the first two or three days of the show.

For the amusement of members of the militia an extended programme of sports has been prepared. There will be 100 yards, 220 yards and 440 yards sprints, a relay race, a tug-of-war competition, open to teams from the Fifth and Sixth Regiments and the crews of the Egeria and Shearwater, 150 yards race for officers, a handicap being given according to seniority. These events will be open to militiamen in good standing, that is those who joined last year or previously and not since secured their discharges. It is announced by the officers of the Sixth Regiment that they will hold an "At Home" on Sunday afternoon at their quarters between 4:30 and 6 o'clock. During the stay at New Westminster each man will receive $1 a day, while the officers will be given accommodation and every convenience at the Guichen hotel.

As already stated the regiment headquarters will be at Moody Square and within the boundary of the canvas village military discipline will reign supreme.

Referring to the forthcoming visit of the Fifth and Sixth Regiments to the Dominion exposition, the Columbian says:

"The complete military programme has not yet been given out, but the draft which has been made commences with the arrival of the Fifth and Sixth Regiments on Sunday morning, October 1st. Both will go into camp on Moody Square and in the afternoon a drum-head service will be held in Queen's Park, which will be attended by the two regiments. On Monday afternoon there will be a review at the park, in which the crews of H.M.S. Shearwater and Egeria will take part as well as the members of the militia. After this a programme of sports will be run off and in this will be included a tug-of-war between three teams from the Fifth, Fifth and the ships. It has been hinted that the crews' race is also down as one of the events, with handicaps, but it is not yet known whether the starters will be placed according to rank or speed."

An event of peculiar military significance during the past week, was the visit of Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia and defence, to Victoria. During his stay here he was extremely busy, inspecting the interior economy of the Fifth Regiment, the Garrison at Work Point, the Macaulay, Signal Hill and other Esquimalt fortresses. His examination was most systematic, not a detail of any importance in the defence of this western town escaped his eye. As was stated by the Times during the week, one of the principal objects of the minister's visit to the West was to personally acquaint himself with the character of the defences assumed by the Dominion government when it took the responsibilities of the maintenance of the Canadian coast stations from the shoulders of the Imperial authorities. Although his inspection, on this account, was most thorough, Sir Frederick Borden did not give more than a hint of the intentions of the department over which he exercises control with reference to Esquimalt. He would not state whether the strength of the force now at Work Point would be increased or otherwise. He did, however, make one rather important announcement, namely, that at both Halifax and Esquimalt training depots would be established similar to those at Toronto, London and other points in Eastern Canada. Another statement with regard to the formation of the nucleus of a Canadian navy at different points on the Atlantic, one would undoubtedly be put in service on the Pacific Coast. These undoubtedly were the two most important pieces of information given out by the minister. In his informal meeting with prominent citizens at the Driford hotel he displayed a keen interest in all military matters and promised to give the suggestions offered by different individuals every consideration. He displayed a keen interest in the Cadet corps, agreed to look into the matter of securing smaller rifles for the boys, and devoted a part of his address to the possibility of arranging a play whereby efficient instructors might be appointed on a financial basis satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Although Sir Frederick Borden was unable to give much definite news in reference to the government's policy at Esquimalt, his remarks would lead to believe that the government was determined to place at present stationed there, in this connection it might be mentioned that the Imperial government has not yet been completed. Before the immense $2.2 million is ready for service considerable money will have to be spent. The guns have yet to be mounted and the hydraulic appliances for loading and unloading have still to be installed. This must now be done by the Dominion government, hence Sir Frederick Borden's careful inspection.

Before leaving Sir Frederick expressed his appreciation of the hospitality accorded him by the officers' mess, not only at the banquet given in his honor, but throughout his visit to Victoria. Members of the Fifth Regiment Rifle Association are already commencing preparation for the annual Thanksgiving shoot at Clover Point. They intend to appoint a committee to canvas for merchandise prizes to offer on that occasion. It is hoped that there will be a generous response. Co. Sergeant Major for the Government, has not yet been selected. The most successful Thanksgiving meets in the annals of the association.

The announcement that quite a number of the Royal Garrison Artillery stationed at Work Point have enlisted with the Canadian permanent forces and will be stationed at Halifax has aroused much interest among Victorians. This has been accentuated by the fact that several of these are prominent members of the Garrison Association Football Club. Their approaching departure on this account is much regretted by local athletes, because of the effect it will have on the championship of the eleven in the pending championship football series. In order that the old rivals, the Garrison and Victoria-United teams, might once more try conclusions upon the same basis as last season a match was arranged to take place this afternoon. This struggle is in progress as the Times goes to press.

"It has long been recognized that important changes were necessary in the training of naval cadets. The Admiralty has now finally decided on the course it intends to adopt in this respect. A shore establishment is being provided at Bermuda, and to this the cadets will be sent when they complete their terms at the Osborne and Britannia colleges, and before they embark for regular instruction in sea-going duties with a fleet in being. Instead of the less and Highflyer-only being employed as training ships, the cruiser Eclipse, now in the reserve at Devonport, is also to be utilized in this service. Under the new scheme the first batch of cadets will leave England for Bermuda in the Eclipse and Highflyer on the 18th instant, returning in the middle of next January. This, it is felt, will enable the cadets to obtain a more practical insight into their duties at the outset, and benefit them throughout their subsequent careers. In all details of education the Admiralty is up and doing, determined that it shall not be its fault if our future admirals are not the best fitted in the world for the responsibilities of command."—The London World.

deduced a little more. I imagine that you saw all that I did."

"I saw nothing remarkable save the bell-ropes, and what purpose they could answer I confess I more than I can imagine."

"You saw the ventilator, too?"

"Yes, but I do not think that it is such a very unusual thing to have a small opening between two rooms. It was so small that a rat could hardly pass through."

"I know that we should find a ventilator before ever we came to Stoke Moran."

"My dear Holmes!"

"Oh yes, I did. You remember in her statement she said that her sister could smell Dr. Roylott's cigar. Now, of course, that suggested at once that there must be a communication between the two rooms. It could only be a small one, or it would have been remarked upon at the coroner's inquiry. I deduced a ventilator."

"But what harm can there be in that?"

"Well, there is a very curious coincidence of dates. A ventilator is made, a bed is hung, and a lady who sleeps in the bed dies. Does not that strike you?"

"I cannot see any connection."

"Did you observe anything very peculiar about that bed?"

"No."

"It was clamped to the floor. Did you ever see a bed fastened like that before?"

"I cannot say that I have."

"The lady could not move her bed. It must always be in the same relative position to the ventilator and to the rope for so we may call it, since it was cleverly never meant for a bell pull."

"Holmes, I do not seem to see any connection. You are thinking of it all just in time to prevent some subtle and horrible crime."

"Subtle enough, and horrible enough. When a doctor does go wrong he is the first of criminals. He has nerve and he has knowledge. Palmer and Peithard were among the heads of their profession. This man strikes even deeper, and I think Watson, that you shall be able to strike deeper still. But we shall have horrors enough before the night is over for goodness' sake let us have a quiet pipe and turn our minds for a few hours to something more cheerful."

About 9 o'clock the light among the trees was extinguished and all was dark in the direction of the Manor House. Two hours passed slowly away, and then suddenly, just at the stroke of 11, a single bright light shone out right in front of us.

"That is our signal," said Holmes, springing to his feet. "It comes from the middle window."

As we passed on he exchanged a few words with the landlady, explaining that we were going on a late visit to an acquaintance, and that it was possible that we might spend the night there. A moment later we were on the dark road, a chill wind blowing in our faces, and one yellow light twinkling in front of us through the gloom to guide us on our sombre errand.

There was little difficulty in entering the grounds, for unprepared branches gnawed in the old park wall. Making our way among the trees we reached the lawn, crossed it, and were about to enter through the wicket gate when a small clump of laurel bushes, that stretched across the path, seemed to hide a hidden and distorted child, who threw itself upon the grass with writhing limbs and then ran swiftly towards the law into the darkness.

"My God," I whispered. "Did you see that?"

"Holmes was for the moment as startled as I. His hand closed like a vice upon my wrist in his agitation. Then he broke into a low laugh and put his lips to my ear.

"It is a nice household," he murmured. "That is the baboon."

I had forgotten the strange pet which the doctor affected. There was a cheetah, too; perhaps we might find it upon our shakedown in my moment. I confess that I felt a certain repugnance when, after following Holmes' example and slipping off my shoes, I found myself inside the bedroom. My companion, who had closed the shutters, moved the lamp on to the table and cast his eyes round the room. All was as we had seen it in the daytime. Then creeping up to me and making a trumpet of his hand he whispered into my ear again so gently that it was as if I could do to distinguish the words.

"The best sound would be fatal to our plans."

I nodded again.

"Do not go asleep; your very life may depend upon it. Have your pistol ready in case we should need it. I will sit on the side of the bed and you sit in that chair."

I took out my revolver and laid it on the corner of the table.

Holmes had brought up a long thin cane, and this he placed upon the bed beside him. By it he laid the box of matches and the stump of a candle. Then he turned down the lamp, and we were left in darkness.

How shall I ever forget that dreadful night! I could not hear a sound, not even the drawing of a breath, and yet I knew that my companion sat open-eyed within a few feet of me in the same state of nervous tension in which I was myself. The shutters cut off all ray of light, and we waited in absolute darkness. From outside came the occasional cry of a night bird, and once at our very window a long drawn cat-like wailing, which told us that the cheetah was indeed at liberty. Far away we could hear the deep tones of the parish clock, which boomed out every quarter of an hour. How long they seemed, those quarters. Twelve struck, and one and two and three, and still we sat waiting silently for whatever might befall.

Suddenly there was the momentary gleam of a light upon the direction of the ventilator which vanished immediately, but was succeeded by a strong smell of burning oil and heated metal. Some one in the next room had lit a dark-lantern. I heard a gentle sound of movement, and then all was silent once more, though the small grew stronger. For half an hour I sat with straining ears. Then suddenly another sound became audible—a very gentle, soothing sound, like that of a small jet of steam escaping continually from a kettle. The instant that we heard it Holmes sprang from the bed, struck a match and rushed furiously with his cane to the bell pull.

"You see it, Watson?" he yelled. "You see it?"

"But I saw nothing. At the moment when Holmes rushed from the light I heard a low, clear whistle, but the sudden glare flashing into my weary eyes made it impossible for me to tell what it was

When Indigestion Grips You

It is not merely "something you ate" at the last meal—it is weakness in the stomach. A pain is Nature's danger signal that something is wrong. Indigestion is the stomach's way of telling you that it can't or won't work.

Now is the time to take FRUIT-A-TIVES. These fruit tablets rest the stomach—bring out a copious flow of gastric juice at meal time—and make the stomach and intestines digest everything you eat.

You know that Fruit-a-tives are doing you good—because there is no more pain—no more sour stomach—no belching gas. Fruit-a-tives keep the stomach clean and healthy—and ready to digest any sensible meal you eat while the constipation is entirely cured by their use.

"Fruit-a-tives are most valuable in the home. We have used two boxes and are today getting a third, which tells our opinion of to take and very cleansing to their action."

At which my friend looked so savagely. I could, however, see that his face was deadly pale and filled with horror and loathing.

He had crept to the ventilator and was gazing up at the ventilator when suddenly three broke from the silence of the night—the most horrible cry to which I have ever listened. It swelled up louder and louder till it reached a pitch of agony and then it died away in a long, low wailing cry.

They say that away in the village, and even in the distant parsonage, that they struck cold to our hearts, and I stood the last echoes of it died away into the silence from which it came.

"What can it mean?" I gasped.

"It means that it is all over," Holmes answered. "And perhaps, after all, it is for the best. Take your pistol, and we will enter Dr. Roylott's room."

With a grave face he lit the lamp and led the way down the corridor. Twice he struck at the chamber door without any result, and then he turned the handle and entered, I at his heels with the cocked pistol in my hand.

It was a singular sight which met our eyes. On the table stood a dark lantern with the shutter half open, throwing a brilliant beam of light upon the iron safe, the door of which was ajar. Beside this table, on the wooden chair, sat Dr. Grimesby Roylott, clad in a long gray dressing-gown, his bare ankles protruding beneath, and his feet thrust into red velvet Turkish slippers.

Across his lap lay the short stick with the long lash which we had noticed during the day. His chin was cocked up, and his eyes were fixed in a dreadful, rigid stare at the corner of the ceiling.

His head, which he had a peculiar yellow hair, was brown speckled, which seemed to be bound tightly round his head. As we entered he made neither sound nor motion.

The hand! the speckled hand! whispered Holmes.

I took a step forward. In an instant his strange headgear began to move, and there reared itself from among his hair the squat diamond-shaped head, so puffed-out with a poisonous serpent.

"It is a cooing adder," cried Holmes; "the deadliest snake in the world. He has died within ten seconds of being bitten. Violence does, in truth, recoil upon the violent, and the schemer falls into the snare which he digs for another. Let us thrust this snake back into its den, and we can then remove Miss Stonor to some place of shelter, and let the county police know what has happened."

As he spoke he drew the dog-whip which lay on the dead man's lap, and throwing the noose round the reptile's neck, he drew it from its horrid perch, and carrying it at arm's length, threw it into the iron safe, which he closed upon it.

Such are the true facts of the death of Dr. Grimesby Roylott, of Stoke Moran. It is not necessary that I should produce a narrative which has already run to too great a length, by telling how we broke the bad news to the terrified girl, how she conveyed her by the morning train to the care of her good aunt, and how we traced her to the conclusion that the doctor met his fate while indiscreetly playing with a dangerous pet. The little that I had yet to learn of the case was told me by Miss Stonor, as we traveled back the next day.

"I had," said he, "come to an entirely erroneous conclusion, which shows, my dear Watson, how dangerous it always is to reason from insufficient data. The presence of the serpent, and the use of the word 'hand,' which was used by the poor girl, no doubt to explain the appearance which she had caught a hurried glimpse of by the light of her match, were sufficient to put me upon an entirely wrong scent. I can only claim the merit that I instantly reconsidered my position when, however, it became clear to me that whatever danger threatened an occupant of the room, could not come out either from the window or the door. My attention was specially drawn, as I have already remarked to you, to this ventilator, and to the bell-rope which hung down to the bed. The discovery that this was a flimsy, and that the bed was clamped to the floor, instantly gave rise to the suspicion that the rope was there as a bridge for something passing through the hole, and coming to the bed. The idea of a snake instantly occurred to me, and I complied with my knowledge that the doctor was furnished with a supply of croatoons from India. I felt that I was probably on the right track. The idea of using a form of poison which could not possibly be discovered by any chemical test, and just such a one as would occur to a clever and ruthless man who had an Eastern training. The possibility with which such a poison would take effect would also, from his point of view, be an advantage. It would be a sharp-eyed corner indeed, who could distinguish the two little red punctures which would show where the poison fangs had done their work. Then I thought of the whistle. Of course he must reveal the snake before the morning light revealed it to the victim. He had trained it, probably, by the use of the milk which we saw, to return to him when summoned. He would put it through this ventilator at the hour that he thought best, with the certainty that it would crawl down the rope and land on the bed. It might or might not bite the occupant, perhaps she might escape every night for a week, but sooner or later she must fall a victim.

"I half come to these conclusions before ever I had entered his room. An inspection of his chair showed me that he had been in the habit of standing on it, which of course would be necessary in order that he should reach the ventilator. The sight of the safe, the sender of milk, and the long of whip-cord were enough to finally dispel all doubts, which may have remained. The metallic clang heard by Miss Stonor, was obviously caused by her stepfather hastily closing the door of his safe upon his terrible occupant. Having made up my mind, you know the steps I made up I took in order to put the matter to the proof. I heard the creature hiss as I have no doubt that you did also, and I instantly lit the light and attacked it."

"With the result of driving it through the ventilator."

"And also with the result of causing it to turn upon its master at the other side. Some of the blows of my cane must have struck it, and it snatched temper, so that it flex upon the first person it saw. In this way I am not directly responsible for Dr. Grimesby Roylott's death, and I cannot say it is likely to weigh very heavily upon my conscience."

EMPEROR'S HUMBLE COTTAGE.

The German Emperor usually spends his summers at Kadenen, on the north-east coast of Pomerania. Kadenen is such a small village that its railway station is simply a waiting room; tickets have to be bought on the train. The royal residence is a plain, two-story cottage, so small that the Emperor, who prefers to spend his summers on his yacht, never stays there more than a few hours. From the park adjoining the house one gets fine views of the Danziger Bay. Near the park there is to be seen a botanic curiosity—a far-famed oak tree which is more than 1,000 years old. Its spacious trunk has been hollowed and pierced with windows and a table, on which a game of skat is occasionally played by the natives.

NO DOOR OR WINDOW.

At Maryland, Essex, a man lives in a shed which has neither door nor windows. Entrance is made from a hole in the roof by means of a ladder. The shed was built by the occupant, and the Maldon council doubts its power to order its removal.

HOSTS AND HOSTESSES ON THE SCOTTISH MOORS

Aristocrats of Great Britain in the Land of the Tartan, Where Old Customs Still Reign.

With grouse shooting, deer stalking and the shooting of black game now in full swing, Scotland enjoys its annual holiday.

King Edward is to arrive at Balmoral about September 15, immediately after the race week at Doncaster, and will spend nearly a month in Scotland, coming south for the second and last time in the season.

Smart society follows his lead, and as the Highland sports and Lowland meetings nearly all take place in September, the fact remains that six weeks see the high-water mark of our season in Scotland. But the Duke and Duchess of Fife remain much longer at Mar Lodge and many lovers of the country and of sport find a charm in the shortening days of child October.

HOSTS AND HOSTESSES.

Scotland is a rich country and an important one, and those who are more or less noble and wealthy persons who entertain in splendid season. The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland give a series of parties at Balmoral Castle; the Duke and Duchess of Westminster are at Stack Lodge, Sutherlandshire; the Duke of Atholl has his "shoots" at Blair Atholl; the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe entertain at Floors Castle; and the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch hold high state at Drumlanrig Castle, Nithsdale. Lord and Lady Breadalbane receive at Taymouth Castle; Lord and Lady Annesley at Drumlanrig Castle; Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin at Balmacraan, and Mr. and Mrs. Neumann at Invercauld.

Life in a Scotch country house differs in many ways from the manners and customs of an English abode. Sport is the aim of existence, and the ordering of the day—drives, games, hours for meals and everything else—is regulated by the will of this omnipotent deity. Breakfast is an early affair and dinner a late one, the latter often being put off until 8 o'clock. And in the evening, when once take a back seat, as men tired with a day's sport prefer armchairs to the whiff of the pipe, and their beds to a bunk at Balmoral.

OLD CUSTOMS.

The Duke of Atholl, Argyll and Sutherland, Lord Kinross, Lord Mar and Kellie, and many others all love to conform to the customs of their country. The wearing of the kilt is still carefully observed in smart society in Scotland. A gentleman of high degree dons a kilt of the plaid of his house, and wears a sporran and a sword. And they go to the races, and in the evening, when he dresses for dinner, he puts on his full-dress tunic, with sporran and richly jeweled belt.

After dinner, at dessert, the Highland pipes enter the dining room, and, strutting proudly around and around the table, play lively tunes on their bagpipes. And they go to the round, every morning at 8, and arouse the sleepers with their "divine music." Every great house has its pipe, and the office is often an hereditary one. In fact, the old feudal spirit dies hard in Scotland, and ancient customs are faithfully maintained.

SAYS SHE WAS CURED AT SHRINE OF LOURDES

Woman Implicitly Believes That Miracle Was Wrought in Her Case.

(Special Cable.)

London, Sept. 15.—Six surgeons declared I was dying, and I went to Lourdes, and I was cured.

Sitting in her pretty drawing room in a West London suburb, a tall and stately woman, smiling and content, looking black, with beautiful golden hair and soft Irish eyes, made this statement yesterday.

"I was suffering from a terrible internal growth," she explained, "a fibrous tumor. Six surgeons, all well-known men, examined me, and they told me that I should never see my husband again. They said that the growth was so large that it would kill me. I was in a dying state when I reached Lourdes. For nine days I bathed and prayed, and then I left Lourdes, feeling better, but not knowing that I had been cured. A fortnight later the swelling was gone, and the doctors said that all traces of the tumor had disappeared. I could bathe in the waters and pray my life might be saved to my husband and children."

A fortnight later the swelling was gone, and the doctors said that all traces of the tumor had disappeared. I could bathe in the waters and pray my life might be saved to my husband and children."

"I have seen a miracle wrought before my own eyes," she replied. "There was a little girl, only 9 years old, at Lourdes. Both her legs were tubercular, and she had never known the use of her legs. Her mother, who brought her to the Grotto, was a wealthy woman, but she had been unable to cure the child. I saw the little thing carried down to the water. After the first day's immersion the Medical Committee of Lourdes pronounced her legs to be free from the slightest tuberculous, and when she had completed her set of nine baths the child, who had never known the use of her limbs, walked unaided, to the Grotto to give thanks."

MARRIED MAN CURED.

"While I was at Lourdes a man who had lost the use of his legs in a railway accident bathed in the waters, and was cured. Those who had witnessed him being carried down to the water saw him carry his discarded crutches to the Grotto, which is hung around with the crutches of those

EXTINCTION MENACES PREHISTORIC GIANT

Colossal Human Figure Cut in Side of Hill Vanishing in Outline.

(Special Cable.)

London, Sept. 15.—An interesting survival of prehistoric England is threatened with destruction by the action of the elements. This is the "Giant," a colossal human figure cut in the side of a lofty hill that overlooks the picturesque valley of Dorchester. The figure is 100 feet high, and its head is 20 feet in diameter. It is now barely visible, for the hillside is being washed away by the winter rains, and it is now barely visible. Grass has so encroached on the channels that, seen from a distance, the details of the gigantic figure are hard to trace, though the uncouth human form is still recognizable. The cost of renovating the giant is estimated at about £50, but no one in the locality knows where to find the money to come from.

Man, as he is styled by natives of Dorset, is the Abbot's "Giant," a colossal human figure, the work of a truly heroic lines. He stands 100 feet high, and his right hand grasps a knotted club 12 feet long. The unknown artist had his own notions of the just proportions of the human frame, as will be seen from the following further measurements: Length of body, 77 feet; legs, 90 feet; head, 2 feet; right arm, 105 feet; nose, 6 feet; diameter of eyes, 2 1/2 feet.

The antiquity of the figure is accepted by all archaeologists. Most authorities ascribe it to the Celtic period, while some have held that it represents an old idol once worshipped by the Pagan West Saxons. Another theory is that it was the work of the monks of the then newly founded Benedictine Abbey of Cerne. Some color is given to this theory by the existence of a similar figure at Wilton, in Sussex, where once stood a Benedictine priory.

English Public Becoming More Enlightened, Three-Card Trick Is Played Out.

(Special Cable.)

London, Sept. 15.—The three-card trick is at last played out. The other day at least twenty-four card swindlers went to Windsor to attend the races, and they returned home practically penniless.

"At none of the metropolitan meetings," said one of the fraternity yesterday, "can we find anybody to 'take us on.' We have to make long journeys into the country, and even the yokels are getting shy of us. We are performing a fair catstrophe last week. We made the long and expensive railway journey to Devonshire, as a little money, and we were met by a party of near Plymouth, but when we got there we found that the races had been postponed for a week. Well, we hadn't got a halfpenny, and we had to walk all the way back to London."

"To-day there is no business. We have scattered and hidden to the course two or three times by brake, and also on the river launches, but the people are too 'fy' for us, and the police have always got their eyes in our direction."

"Yes, we often pay first-class fares on railway journeys if we see any likelihood of business. Sometimes we come across a 'swell' who has been drinking, and we clear him out, but, to tell you the truth, sir, so few people get the worse for drink nowadays that it is really difficult to earn an honest living."

"What are our best hunting grounds? Well, the Oxford and Cambridge boat race used to provide us with good results, and a royal review at Aldershot is not so bad. Soldiers were among our best customers, but even Tommy Atkins is now getting too smart for us."

PET WOLVES SCARCE SINCE MOTOR CRAZE

Keeping of Wild Animals and of Automobiles Entails Too Much Expense.

(Special Cable.)

London, Sept. 15.—Owing to the boom in the motor-car industry, the wild animal trade is being seriously damaged. Jaanrah, the king of wild beast importers, speaking on the subject yesterday, said: "Yes, it is a fact, people previously used to keep private menageries at their country houses, but owing to the craze for motoring they are giving up the hobby."

"You see, the keeping of wild animals is a considerable expense, and I am afraid motor cars are not quite so cheaply maintained as people may imagine."

"Most of my business is now done with travelling menageries and the principal zoological gardens of the world."

"Still, there is quite a demand for tame wolves, which can be trained to take sugar from between pretty lips. But they do not seem to be the most desirable of pets, do they?"

ALPINE GLACIER GIVES UP ITS DEAD

Body of Man Who Perished in Peaks in 1902 Discovered by Tourists.

(Special Cable.)

Geneva, September 15.—A party of tourists exploring the upper glacier of the Wetterhorn range yesterday saw a dark mass in a crevice of the ice.

They imagined an accident had just occurred and they hastened to offer assistance. On getting nearer a curious sight met their gaze. It was a human body, firmly imbedded in the glacier. The condition of the body, which was wonderfully well preserved, suggested that it must have been imbedded in the glacier for many years.

At first it was thought possible that the body was that of Dr. Haller, a Swiss tourist, who was lost on the glacier, with two guides, twenty-five years ago. A large party of guides went to fetch in the body and to search for any more that might have been discovered by the breaking up of the glacier. The work was difficult and dangerous for furious thunderstorms are raging on the mountains. Communication with Grindelwald is interrupted.

When the guides searched the body they found that it was the remains of Dr. Haller, who had perished in 1902. The body was found in a German military passport issued in 1902.

The glaciers are unusually active at present, and they have given up several of their almost forgotten dead. Hopes are reviving that the body of Lord Francis Douglas, who was lost on the Matterhorn forty years ago, may also be discovered.

TREASURE SEEKERS SUSPEND THEIR WORK

Appliances for Recovery of Gold in Sunken Spanish Ship Not Adequate.

(Special Cable.)

Edinburgh, Sept. 15.

Diving operations in Tormore Bay for the purpose of discovering lost Spanish treasure have been discontinued for the season.

The task of removing the mountain of clay and boulders lying inside and around the hulk of the Admiral of Florence, has proved too great for the appliances on board the diving ship Bismarck; but Captain Burns and his divers now know the difficulties of the undertaking and are in a position to advise the syndicate which has entered upon the search for the sunken treasure as to what will be necessary to carry the enterprise to a successful issue.

There is little doubt but that if the steam power had been trebled, and the staff of divers proportionately increased, the stern of the treasure ship would have been reached before now, and the position of the strong room definitely ascertained. The divers were within the fore hold of the vessel two years ago, but the stern is eighteen feet deeper in the silt, and this has added immensely to the difficulties of the operations.

The work of exploration began on July 8 of the present year, and within a few hours of starting a number of sword blades were found. Afterwards, at various times during the search, other discoveries were made. These included seven Spanish silver coins, dated 1588, and several cannon balls, found on the bank near, or under, which the frigate is believed to be.

Two years ago a bronze breast-plate and gun was brought up, and in 1910 a brass cannon of exquisite workmanship was recovered. Pistols, huge links of chain, and pieces of eight, have also been found at various times.

NEW YACHT FOR KAISER.

(Special Cable.)

Kiel, Sept. 15.—The Kaiser has definitely determined on the building of a new yacht.

During His Majesty's last voyage to the Mediterranean the model of a new yacht was submitted to him by an English firm, larger and simpler than the Hohenzollern. The Kaiser has, however, given preference to a model from a Kiel shipyard.

The new yacht, which will be replaced from the Victoria and Albert, King Edward's yacht.

HARD WORKED RECTOR.

London, Sept. 15.—The Rev. Vernon Lane Gules, rector of Stopham, near Pulborough, Sussex, not only conducts the services in his church single handed, but also acts as Sunday school teacher, bell ringer, and leader of the singing, and presides at the organ.

WIDOW'S MITE.

London, Sept. 15.—The vicar of St. Peter's Church, in counting out last Sunday's collection, found in the box a penny postage stamp, on the reverse side of which was written: "This is all I can afford. It is the widow's mite."

GIANT OF THE SEA.

London, Sept. 15.—While fishing with a rod and line in the sea near Penzance, Mr. Ashby, of that town, hooked a halibut. He played it for over two hours, and when he landed it he found that it weighed eighty-five pounds and was over four feet long.

WEDDING CAME AFTER 45 YEARS' COURTSHIP

During That Time Couple Exchanged 3,000 Letters and Four Dozen Photographs.

(Special Cable.)

Geneva, Sept. 15.

After a courtship of more than forty-five years, the marriage was celebrated yesterday at Constantine of a Swiss named Herzfeld, aged 66 years, and Miss Steindelt, who is 65 years old.

The couple became engaged before they were 20 years of age, and soon after young Herzfeld left for America in search of fortune, telling his fiancée that he would not return without £100,000, and asking her to wait for him. During the forty-five years the lovers exchanged nearly 3,000 letters and four dozen photographs, and they recognized each other without difficulty on meeting again.

The newly married pair will leave shortly for Chicago, where Mr. Herzfeld has a large business.

HEROINE OF A WAR DIES IN POVERTY

Went Through Whole Franco-German Campaign and Often Shouldered Musket.

(Special Cable.)

Paris, Sept. 15.—"Mother" Jarrethout, "the glorious Breton," is dead. Until Mrs. Hofer, the £200,000 heiress, was the most famous of the cantinières in the French Army. She was born in 1817, and was 32 when war with Germany broke out. She enlisted as a cantinière so as to serve her country and be with her husband and sons, both privates in the French army.

Mrs. Jarrethout went through the whole campaign as cook, the nurse, sometimes as a soldier, too, for she could use a rifle, and did so on occasions. At Abbeville, in October, 1870, she took two prisoners in an exchange with the White Crosses. At Alençon, in the following January, she was severely wounded, but tied up her wound and went on caring for the wounds of "her children," as she called the soldiers.

Finally, during the siege of Chateau d'Ux she dressed herself in a man's uniform, took her turn on the walls with the defenders of the town, and when her work there was done threw a loose gown over her uniform, and went to do what she could for the sick and wounded in the hospital.

For her bravery Mrs. Jarrethout was given the Cross of the Legion of Honor, and on official occasions numbers of lesser medals decorated her. She died in poverty, and her burial yesterday was of the simplest class. But a platoon of soldiers followed the corpse to the grave, and officers made speeches over it, and her old comrades gathered from all parts of France to say good-bye. She was a good woman and a brave one, and she was a veteran, whom she had nursed thirty-five years ago, and his few words were worth more than all the glory in the official speeches.

UNDERTAKERS' THANK OFFERING.

London, Sept. 15.—The Bishop of London has just received for one of his funds a present of £25 from an undertaker. With it came a letter, in which the donor described the gift as a thank offering "because trade is good just now."

VIVISECTED DAILY FOR TWENTY YEARS

Death Claims Woman Most Remarkable Subject for Experiment in World.

(Special Cable.)

Vienna, September 15.—Frau Magdalena Gelly, who for twenty years had been known among the medical faculty as the "Vivisection Rabbit," died here yesterday at the age of 52. Frau Gelly exercised the curious calling of a subject for anatomical experiments, and her services were in great demand by the most eminent surgeons.

She owed her remarkable reputation as a subject for experiments to an abnormal formation and development of her respiratory organs.

Over these she had a marvelous command, controlling "body at will," and allowing them to be freely operated upon without the use of anaesthetics. Under the operation she described to the assembled surgeons and students the sensations she experienced in her throat, nose, palate, tonsils and other organs under the action of the surgeon's knife.

Frau Gelly reported herself daily at the "Clinical Laboratory" and at the private houses of the most celebrated doctors of Vienna, usually carrying a black reticule containing all sorts of objects such as needles, marbles, pencils, pins, etc., intended to be swallowed or passed through her nostrils or ears for experiments.

As the "Vivisection Rabbit" was paid for each sitting, and averaged two daily for twenty years, she has left a small fortune, and, having died intestate, the money will probably be appropriated by the medical faculty of the university.

Meanwhile great preparations are being made by the whole body of doctors and students to give this remarkable woman an imposing funeral.

English Schools.

As Seen by a Canadian Teacher.

Paper by Miss Marchant, read at Victoria Teachers' Institute, Sept. 8th, 1905.

A year in Merrie England! A year when the school bell changed no longer, when the small boy ceased from troubling, and the weary was comparatively at rest!

Not in entire forgetfulness, though, was it spent, as you shall presently discover. And you ask me, a child of the old and adapted child of the new, "What of the mother country? Can she still teach us, her lusty son of the north? Or is she the scholastically antiquated, church-tidied land we have been wont to regard her, conservative in method and thought, and unprogressive in policy?"

In reply to these your questionings, I can but pass on to you what I have seen and heard; not as one seeking to glorify either to the detriment of the other, but telling the truth simply and fairly, even as you know me all, at plain, blunt naught.

If, then, there be any value in examining into the systems and methods of others engaged in the same great task as ourselves, and I think there is, if there are any improvements which can be made in our own school system, it is to be made by us, and I think there are "attend all ye."

For the sake of clearness, perhaps you will allow me first to briefly outline the public school system of England.

The supreme aim and end of the money grants and local council of appeal, is the best of education. These grants constitute three-fourths of the monetary outlay necessary for working expenses; the remaining fourth is supplied by the local council, which correspond to our boards of education. A committee from each council, assisted by co-opted members, administers school affairs for its locality.

Prior to the act of 1892, schools in England were of two kinds—the board school, managed by a school board, and the denominational school, administered and supported by the sect to which it belonged, though receiving a government grant.

By the recent Education Act, the board has taken over all these, and made them national schools. The dual arrangement, however, has been retained; board schools are now called council schools, wherein no religious dogma is taught, but the Bible may be read without comment; denominational schools are termed voluntary schools, and are governed by boards of management, which partly consist of members of the various denominations. Certain hours of secular education are compulsory, but the remaining school time may be spent in teaching religious dogma, if desired. Nine-tenths of these voluntary schools, particularly in the smaller towns and districts, belong to the established state church, hence the Nonconformist teacher is at a disadvantage.

National schools are either: Elementary, corresponding to our public schools, and comprising seven standards of which the seventh is the highest, or secondary, corresponding to our high schools, where is a small fee charged for secondary schools, but nearly all the elementary schools are free. Some schools appear to be in a transition stage, and are jointly known as higher grade schools.

The board provides a central supply of trained teachers by means of a well-organized pupil-teacher system. At the close of their elementary course the most promising pupils are selected by the various headmasters and recommended as prospective pupil-teachers. Possibly three hundred of these are chosen in the locality of Bristol, and undergo a competitive examination. About fifty of the best become prospective P. T.'s, and are sent to secondary schools, expenses paid. When these reach the age of fourteen, then parents of each child are required to sign an agreement that he will be a pupil-teacher. At the end of his secondary course he is subjected to another examination, and, if successful, achieves the desired pupil-teacher's diploma. But the end is not yet. He must next attend a P. T. training centre. Here, during two years, half the time will be spent in pursuance of his studies, and the other half in observation and practical work at the various schools.

With the completion of his two years' training at the Centre comes the crucial test for the would-be teacher—his King's scholarship examination. The standing obtained at this is of the utmost importance, and to a great extent determines his career.

From the P. T. centre he should proceed to a teachers' training college, where two or more years will be required for a thorough normal training in pedagogical teaching and pedagogics, and also for acquiring the widest range of study. The passing of a rigid examination in teaching and scholarship gives him a teachers' diploma, which qualifies for any position in an elementary school. It is not, however, until after two years' experience that he receives the coveted teachers' parchment, and finally emerges triumphant, a full-fledged pedagogist.

I must not omit to tell you that each teacher is also required to be certificated in drill. The drill instructor, in England, teaches not the pupils, but the teachers. His chief duty is to periodically inspect the drill at each school, to assist if necessary, but mainly to see that his instructions are being faithfully carried out. When to this is added a certificate for singing, I think you will be ready to exclaim with me, "Truly these are the men who have come out of much tribulation."

It is survival of the fittest, you see, there, as here. The best will bring off their generation—the very finest of that which the whole educational machinery has been laboring to produce, lives to teach the next. This is quite fitting and proper. But what, after the toil and the endless endeavor, is their hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? What medal reward of honor or reverence have they? More than here, it is true. What hope? An ultimate distinction or reward other than a comfortable living, while they can teach, and when they can teach no longer, nothing? Again, I say, more there than here.

But I believe in "the good time coming" when public opinion shall be educated, when every "man in the street" shall realize, like Marcus Cælius, of old, as he leaped into the Forum, "I am a Roman, and I will be so no more."

lies not in her teeming rivers and tree-clad mountain slopes, not in her vast prairie farms or exhaustless stores of earth treasure, but in her noble men. I very believe that the day will come when he will at length discern that the great character-forming agent, making all due allowance for heredity, parental training, or what you will, the great character-forming agent is the mostobtrusive but ubiquitous public school teacher.

O shade of Oliver Wendell! What is it that you murmur thus haughtily? "But when that blessed day arrives, 'Then order your accusation duly!'"

And important feature of the English school system, the adoption of which I would especially urge for this province, is the establishment of evening schools.

The public schools are utilized for evening classes, taught by experts in the various branches of work. A nominal fee, two shillings per half year, is charged, but all books and other requisites are provided. The subjects taught include: Commercial arithmetic, shorthand, type writing, literature, French, and English. There is also a class for deaf and dumb pupils, and a basket work class for teachers of defectives.

These schools are duly inspected and examined by the government inspectors, and diplomas recognized throughout England, are granted on the completion of each course.

own, though we have far ampler and more beautiful play grounds. So much for the general plan of the building. Re-entering, we cannot fail to note everywhere evidences of well-being for the convenience and well-being of the teachers. A lunch-room with fireplace is provided, and, for the headmaster, an office, carpeted and furnished with library chairs and desk. On the desk you will notice the typewriter, and the ample piles of stationery stamined with the school crest. Noise seems to be unknown to a museum. Stairs have long since been abolished, all parts of desks and seats are fixtures, cloths are substituted for erasers, patent "non-droppable" blinds are in use, and, lastly, the floors are all paved with solid wooden blocks, laid transversely—a secret boon!

A portion of the floor at the back of each room is raised, and as no waste area is left at the back or sides, and but little in front, the teacher, though he has possibly forty-five to fifty pupils, need never raise his voice above a conversational tone. I cannot affirm that each pupil has in this case his regulation number of cubic feet, but as there obtains no patent scheme of ventilation, he gets a continuous supply of fresh air.

Did you notice the glass case in one of the corridors, filled with standard historical, pedagogical and scientific works? I asked, naturally enough, who supplied these. The half-incredulous reply came promptly, "The committee of course!"

The committee supplies, by the way, all school requisites for the reading, demonstration frames for needle work, plaster casts for the art room, a complete outfit of necessities for the chemical laboratory and domestic science departments—in fact everything that apparatus can do, and it can do a great deal, intelligently used, is done to render the work of teaching less strenuous.

And are you aware that before we entered at all, permission for our visit had to be obtained from the authorities? A novel sensation this, for a Canadian, but the idea impresses me favorably as a cellent, and I use the word advisedly, the excellent discipline which prevails. The Nor must we neglect to remark the exactness may be effected, definite even, but I confess to a fond adherence to the ancient tenet that, other things being equal, the most work, and the most telling work, is done under conditions of strict and rigid discipline.

I have spent half days and whole days in unexpected visits to these public schools, and never have I seen a child even speak or misbehave in any way. This is owing in a great measure, of course, to the thoroughly-trained teachers. Possibly the glass partitions help considerably to be always "living at his best." Much of it is also due to the complete organization of every branch of this multifarious English school system. System! System! System! Like some mighty machine, nicely adjusted in each complicated part, it holds its ground, and its finished human product of body, mind and soul. Why, even the time-table must perfectly be made out at the beginning of each year, signed, re-signed and counter-signed, framed and hung upon the wall for the interested personal of chance inspectors; thereafter to be unalterable as the fastened laws of the Medes and Persians. Even your wandering fellow-laborer was caught in the relentless swirl, and, having stated which subjects he particularly wished to see taught, was relegated, armed with a program of procedure to the various classrooms; and, sure enough, found lessons going on as per program!

The average English assistant teacher, what he has been told to teach, when he is told to teach it, and in the exact manner in which he has been taught to teach it, and he does it. Well, Tenyson's "Who will rid me of the King and the Pope?" suitability of text-books, relative importance of subjects, departments of school work outside his own particular realm, seem of small concern to him. He has a handmaster!

Time is not to be squandered upon the various subjects of study. No copy-lines laid down by pedagogy and the powers that be. Large indeed was the task you set before me, and it is greatly owing to the kind assistance and cordial reception experienced from officials and teachers alike that I was enabled to gather much of the information herein recorded, however imperfect.

In conclusion, it behoves me to say, and most gladly do I pay this tribute to all justice, having experience both as pupil and fellow-teacher, that amongst all the schools visited I have yet to find, despite the paucity of all means of self-improvement in this province, despite the meagre opportunities it affords for the teacher's higher education, I have yet to find, I say, a staff more earnestly desirous, nay, ambitious, to thoroughly equip themselves by giving of their hard-earned time, energy and income, more intelligently alert to the wider educational interests and the larger outlook, than the staff of the public schools of Victoria, B. C.

KEEPING IT QUIET.

Mail and Empire, Toronto.

Two sailors were seated at a table before a cafe. One sailor had a letter before him, and was reading it aloud, while at the same time the other sailor held his hands over the reader's face.

The first sailor, troubled by an irresistible curiosity, paused before the table. "Why," he asked, "do you hold your hands over your friend's eyes while he reads that letter?"

"Because," was the dignified answer, "the letter is from my sweetheart, Jack is reading it to me because I can't read myself. That is all right, but I don't want him to hear a word of what is written."

A correspondent of Nature says he had his portrait painted by two well known artists, and calculated that in each case about 20,000 strokes of the brush were made.

Studies in Credulity

The Dowieites.

(By the Rev. Conrad Noel, in London Chronicle.)

The fact of some thousands of people believing themselves impelled to fly from the tyranny of an imaginary hog and building, in consequence, a City of Refuge, would present a phenomenon sufficient to astound the most experienced student of credulities. Nor would his astonishment be lessened by the further discovery that these builders had crowded their city with a soap factory in solemn and symbolic defiance of the superstitions demon of pigery. And yet who will blame me when I confess that I believe I might find on the track of such a heavy when I came across the following announcement by Manager Hanson, extracted from the letter of a shareholder of the "Zion City Soap Works, Clean, Antihog Soap Factory, Illinois, U. S. A.":

"Thank God that our beloved Zion, through its newly-established soap industry, has taken one more step away from the Unbelievable." "Because," was the dignified answer, "the letter is from my sweetheart, Jack is reading it to me because I can't read myself. That is all right, but I don't want him to hear a word of what is written."

My first deduction, however, was incorrect. Dowie's followers, most not in place, were far too often used in the manufacture of soap; hence the necessity of an anti-hog factory.

Comprehensive Denunciation. Soon after this mistake, in the course of a conversation with one of Zion's Restoration Host, I learned that Zion a couple of minutes and join in simultaneous prayer.

Dr. Dowie's Antecedents.

Dr. John Alexander Dowie is a Scotchman, and a little short of sixty years of age. He became a clerk in a store at Adelaide, and finally joined the Congregational ministry in Sydney. Later we find him preaching to large audiences in America, and announcing himself to be Elijah the third, John Baptist being Elijah the second. Mr. Harold J. Shestone, who gives us these particulars, adds that on this occasion he took a pair of white wings from under his cloak, and strapping them on to his shoulders, asked the audience to indicate their faith in him by lifting the right hand. His followers would seem to render him worshipful obedience. Repeatedly he assures them he is not quite infallible, although "when I speak the Word of the Lord in the name of the Lord I am His Apostle, and must be obeyed." Still he is not. "When you find a perfectly holy person on this earth, you will find my superior, because I am not perfectly holy." Nevertheless, I am not a whit behind the chief of the Apostles." He further thanks God he was never such a sinner as St. Peter, and only wishes he had had his advantage.

The Christian churches are all apostate. The Pope, no doubt, may claim apostolic succession for he is "lineal descendant of Judas Iscariot." The Methodist Episcopalians have been "towed around the secret chamber of Babel." For his own part, John Alexander can conscientiously say—"I thank God that I have not lost the Humility with which I began my ministry" (5).

The disciples are even as their master. The Zion newspaper tells what it describes as a "sweet little story" about a female, a child convert. She was ill, but having been previously cured of diphtheria by faith, when her mother called in a doctor and coaxed her to take medicine, she cried: "Ah, you sinner, why don't you get closer to Jesus?" There is no doubt that Dr. Dowie possesses considerable gifts as a healer, and can truthfully boast of countless cures. The walls of many a Dowie tabernacle are hung with votive offerings, crutches, surgical instruments, and the like, thrown away by converts healed in Zion. Among the offerings are incense tobacco pipes and rosaries.

The Dowieite Creed.

It may be suggested that to take John Alexander seriously is a profound mistake, but the point of including the Dowieites in these credulity studies is that the "profound mistake" of taking him seriously has actually been made by some of thousands of people. He inspires them with extraordinary faith; he heals their sick; he leads them in affairs both temporal and spiritual. At Chicago in the winter of 1891 he founded the church of the Restoration with less than 500 members. It spread like wildfire, and now draws its disciples from almost every nation under Heaven.

Its tenets are that the times of restoration have come. The body should be included in the scheme of redemption. Material things are holy, therefore there is nothing to prevent Christians making the best of both worlds. War is wrong. Poisoning the body is wrong, kidneys are wrong, doctors are wrong, the churches are wrong, and Freemasonry is even more supremely wrong; everything, in fact, is wrong save Dowie, the Restorer, the Prophet, the Apostle, who must be obeyed.

Beyond all this, the Prophet has accomplished the supreme task of building a city and peopling it with twelve thousand inhabitants. It is stated that his lace and candy factories are doing a roaring trade; that fair wages, short hours, and a handsome bonus are the rule; that many of the workers become shareholders, but that the "Profit" Dowie, as his unkind critics call him, holds the largest share. Every shop and every industry is controlled by him, and if you offend him, it is impossible to live in Zion.

This anti-drug, anti-tobacco, anti-epidemic prohibitionism was started by Dowie's purchase of 6,000 acres in the state of Illinois at the cost of a quarter of a million sterling. He sold them to his followers on long-term leases for three millions.

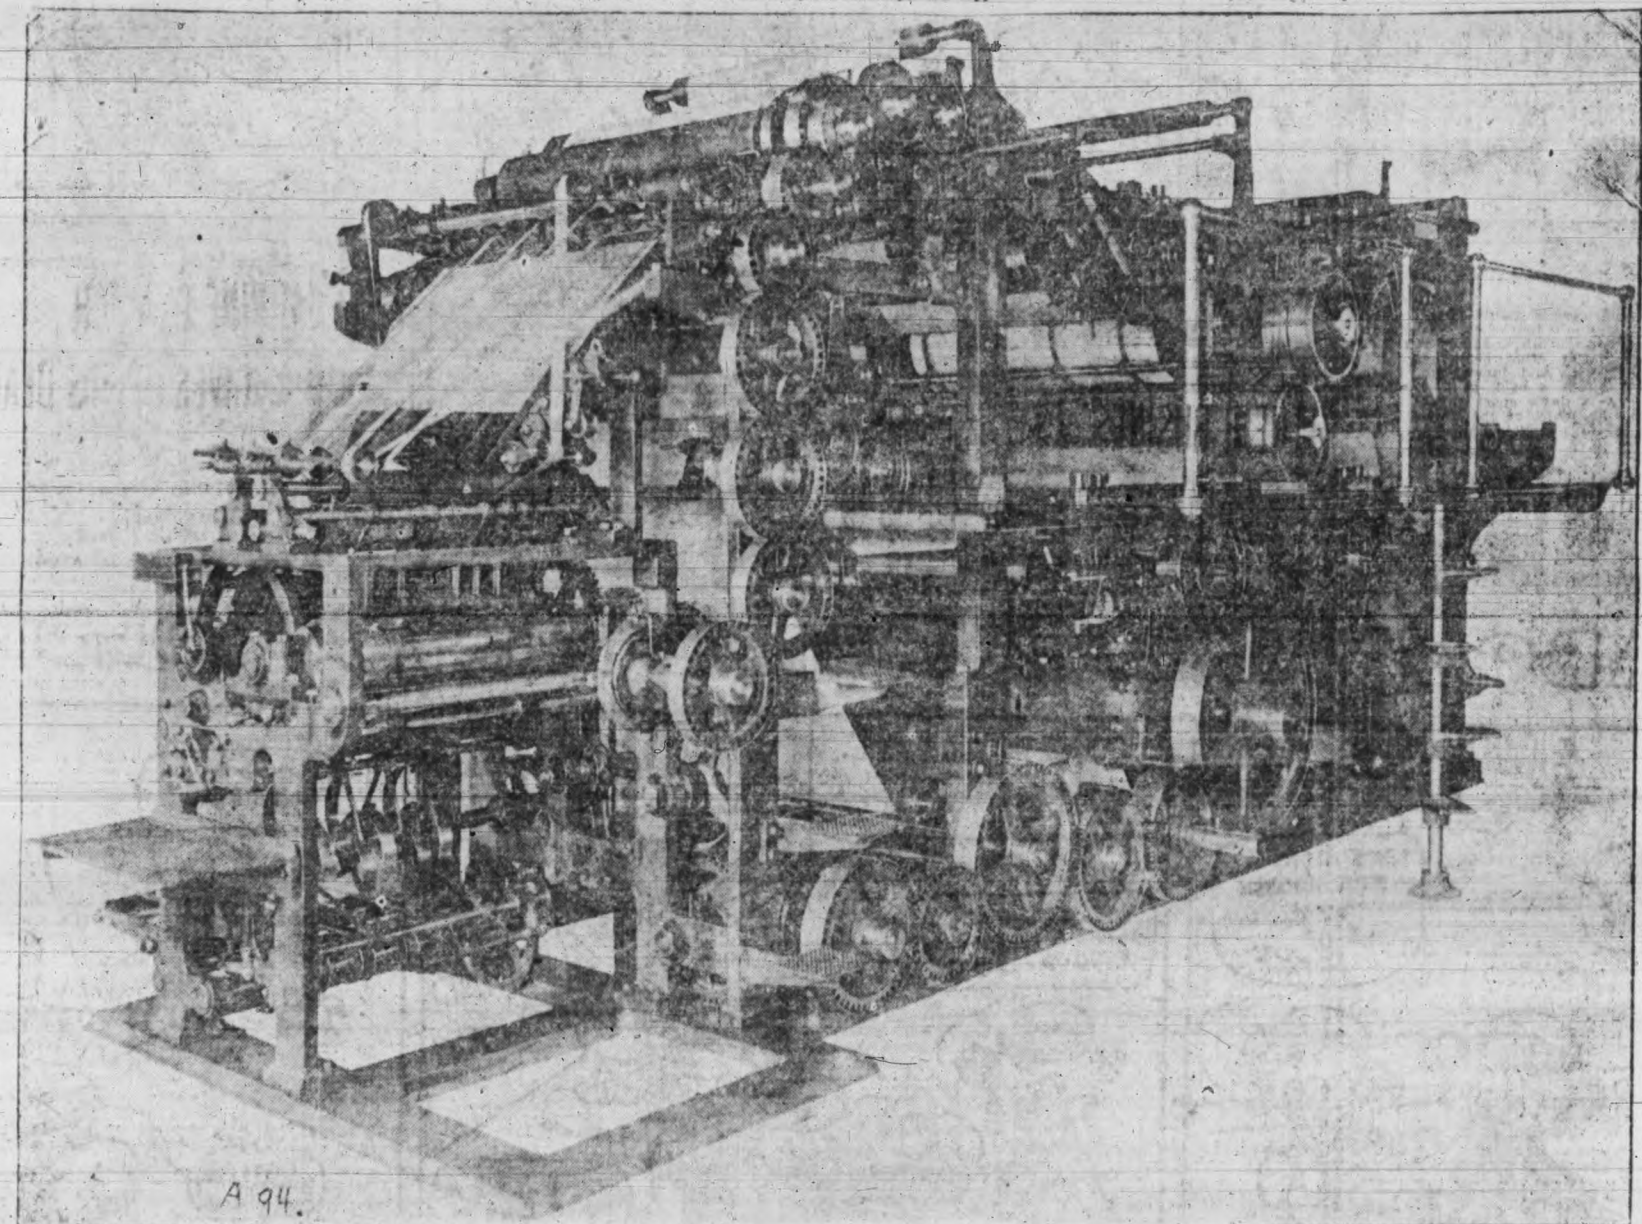

Anyone can settle there if he obeys the laws and pays one-fourth of his income into the public treasury. It has no democratic basis, Democracy being devilish. Theocracy is the only true government. There is one only ruler, and he is His representative on earth. Zion is to be built all over the world, eliminating in the construction of a huge city in Palestine and the rebuilding of the Temple.

I have mentioned the Dowieite opposition to Freemasonry, questioning one of his disciples as the immorality of Masonry. I was told that the initiation ceremonies are terribly indecent, and discovered that the indignity complained of consisted in the fact that the novice had to wear a pair of pants, and that one aware of his vest was turned up beyond the elbow!

It will be remembered how disastrous to last year's visit to England failed. One can hardly blame hotel proprietors, fearful of the mob, for Dowie's expulsion; but the newspapers, who uphold freedom of speech in the abstract were surely tyrannical in this matter. One cannot, however, feel very indignant, when one recalls the appeal that preceded the European tour.

Send an offering to God in a substantial way. Gold, silver, brass, houses, lands, cattle, grain. . . what ever you have to give. . . let them be sent direct to me. Give largely, lovingly, loyally. Let me say that the people of Zion City . . . are responding loyally to this call. They are unexcelledly substantiating the reduction of 20 per cent. in their wages.

Mrs. Mary Cornforth, an inmate of Northampton, Yorkshire, Union workhouse, has attained her hundred birthday. The old lady is in excellent health. She has five grandchildren and fifty great-grandchildren. She can converse freely, but cannot read.

THE TIMES' MAMMOTH NEW HOB PRESS

In this way, adapting, of course, the details to our peculiar needs, much of the waste energy and conflicting interests of a foreign coaching world, I believe, be harmonized and concentrated, and higher education for the million uneducated receive a marked stimulus. In England these schools have been in vogue for many years, are well attended, and meet a real demand. In British Columbia, where there are no free lectures on scientific topics, no technical schools, and no university, their establishment becomes almost imperative.

Knowing the unhappy reputation Americans are all "Americans" there you know, I explained it even unto seventy times seven, but at last gave up the unequal struggle have earned for boasting, when, at the first, our English confederates urged me to explain for their edification, in what respects our schools were superior. I determined to maintain a magnificent silence. When, later on, I had seen their splendidly-equipped buildings, and had witnessed the efficiency of their well-trained teachers, I maintained silence. It is true, for another reason.

At the risk of quite exhausting you already overtaxed patience, I would fain take you with me, "the young lady from America, deeply interested in education" into a typical higher grade school.

We enter first a large, central hall, which is used for prayers and for drill exercises. Glass partitions separate this from the classrooms ranged around. The upper floor is arranged similarly, and each floor is supplied with a piano. By different corridors one may reach the chemical laboratory, the art room, manual training and domestic science departments. The infant school, also, must not be forgotten, where pupils are admitted at such early ages as four or five years, and receive kindergarten training. Outside are to be found cement "base-ments and gravel yards similar to our happy solution of the oft-recurring "rate" problem.

Is not all this as it should be? Ours is at once the most wearing, the most difficult, the most complex, the most important, the task worth while. Advanced educationalists insist upon the enormous personal influence of the teacher—his fund of information, his psychological insight, above all, his magnetism. True economy points therefore to the preservation of this vital energy by all and every means, for the good teacher is rare and an inestimable blessing; "her price is far above rubies."

Another point you cannot fail to note is the air of leisure and freedom from anxiety. There appears to be an entire absence of that oppressive feeling we know so well, that for five and a half hours every day, for five days in every week, for forty-three weeks in every year, our duty is inevitably in the schoolroom. In this English school, the headmaster, and the heads of the elementary and infant schools, have no classes; then there are always one or two pupil-teachers, and probably a teacher-in-training. All these are familiar with the work, and could fill your place capably in case of such contingencies as illness, surplus examination papers, visitors, and the thousand and one ills that teachers are heir to. Effort is also economized by the grouping of classes for callisthenics and marching. I have seen a young girl calmly and efficiently conduct in the large hall one hundred and thirty pupils in a difficult Swedish drill.

The duties of headmasters include the keeping of elaborate and detailed statistics of all pupils received and distributed, a record of each child's monthly standing in each subject, the determining of entrance and adjustment of time and time tables; also a constant supervision for the actual teaching of his, say, twenty assistants.

books are used, writing is taught in the good old-fashioned way, by example.

Of formal grammar, or formal history, in the elementary school at any rate, there is none. History readers, containing biographies of famous men in English history are read. Only the most general geography is attempted. Canadian geography, Canadian geography and Canadian history are treated with a lofty indifference. Canada is becoming a matter of little local interest, however, as the place where Barnardo's charity boys, and the stevedores passengers on the big Atlantic liners go to "work on a farm, or something of that sort."

Recitation lessons, or the repeating of extracts from prescribed selections of poetry, occur daily.

A large proportion of the time is given to literature, both natural and applied. Usually a R. R. conducts the classes in the chemical laboratory.

A teacher certificated from Kensington presides in the art room, while graduates from the domestic science centre unfold to the upper classes of girls the mysteries of cooking, laundry and housewifery. Our school even went so far as to provide a model house, furnished complete from parlor to scullery, where the aspirant little housewives learn their manifold duties at first hand.

The Public School system, judging by its results in Standard V, where a class of boys averaging twelve years of age recited two, three and four part songs in French, took with as sweet and pure tone and correct time as I ever heard, is a complete success.

WHO KILLED TOMMY HILL.

Montreal Star. The action of the authorities on Ontario in refusing to accept the verdict of the coroner's jury entirely exonerating Tommy Hill, the young man who was one of those who fired shots at the Hill house, causing the death of an eleven-year-old boy, is certainly to be commended. Without venturing any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, and there does seem a doubt now as to whether the fatal shot was from his freed shot at the Hill house, and regard every without further investigation, would have been a travesty upon justice.

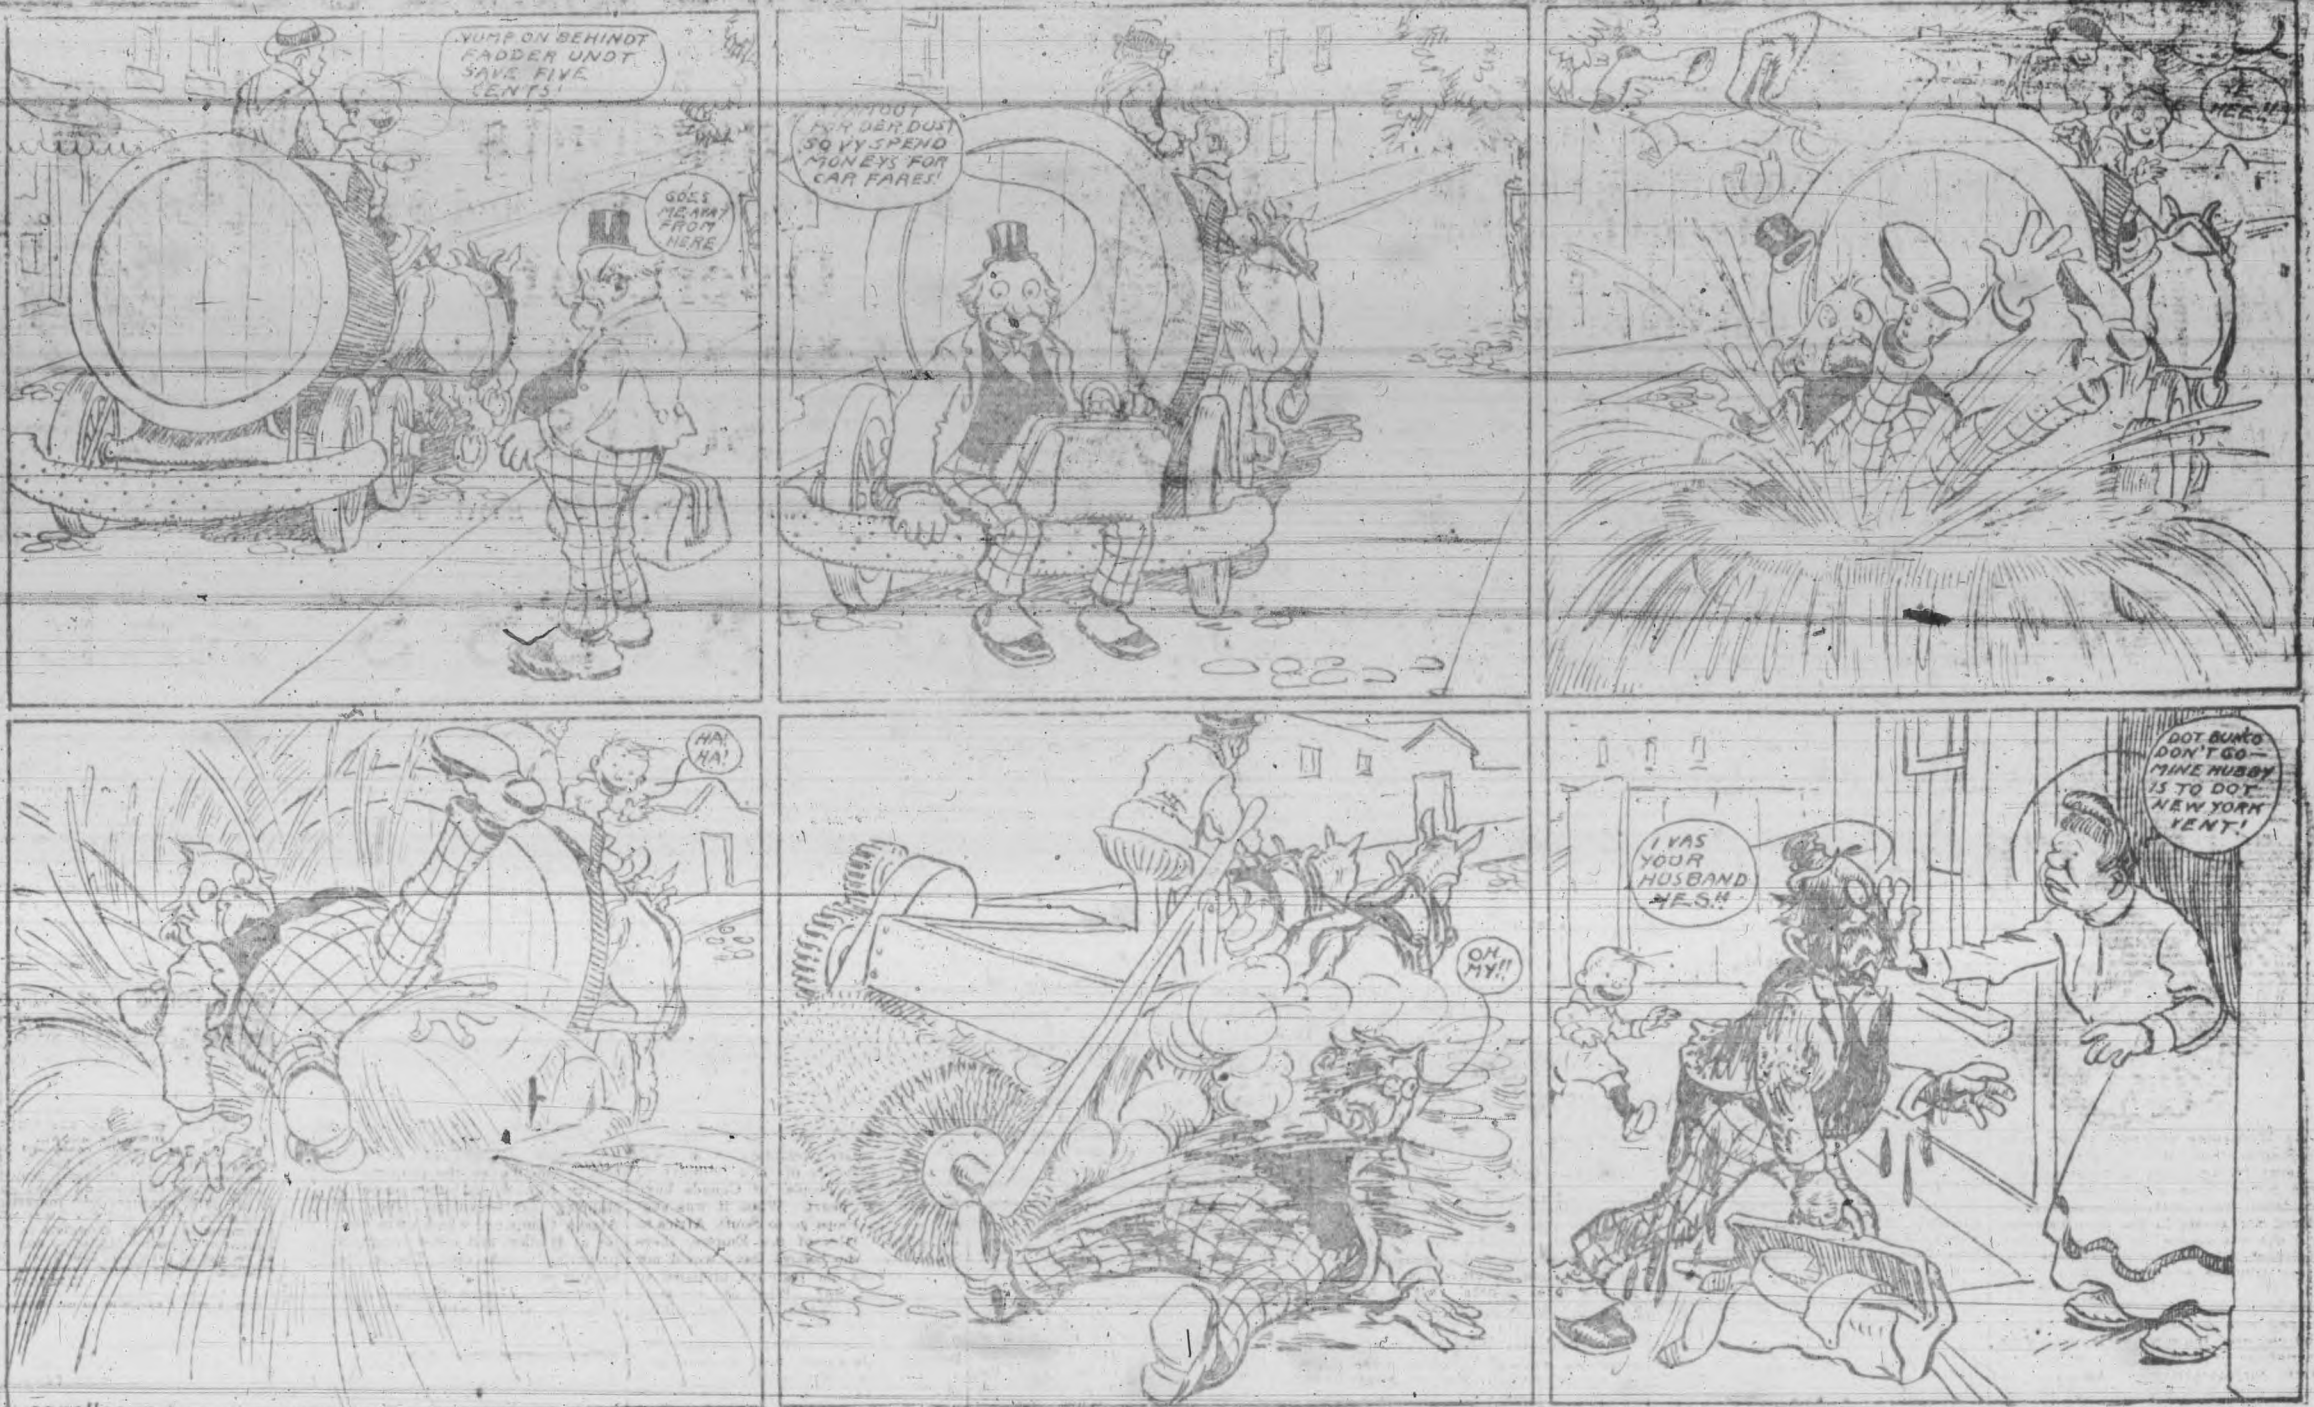

HARMONY.

Baltimore American. Possibly the Car, in dismissing his naval officers, is merely trying to harmonize the number of officers with the number of vessels.

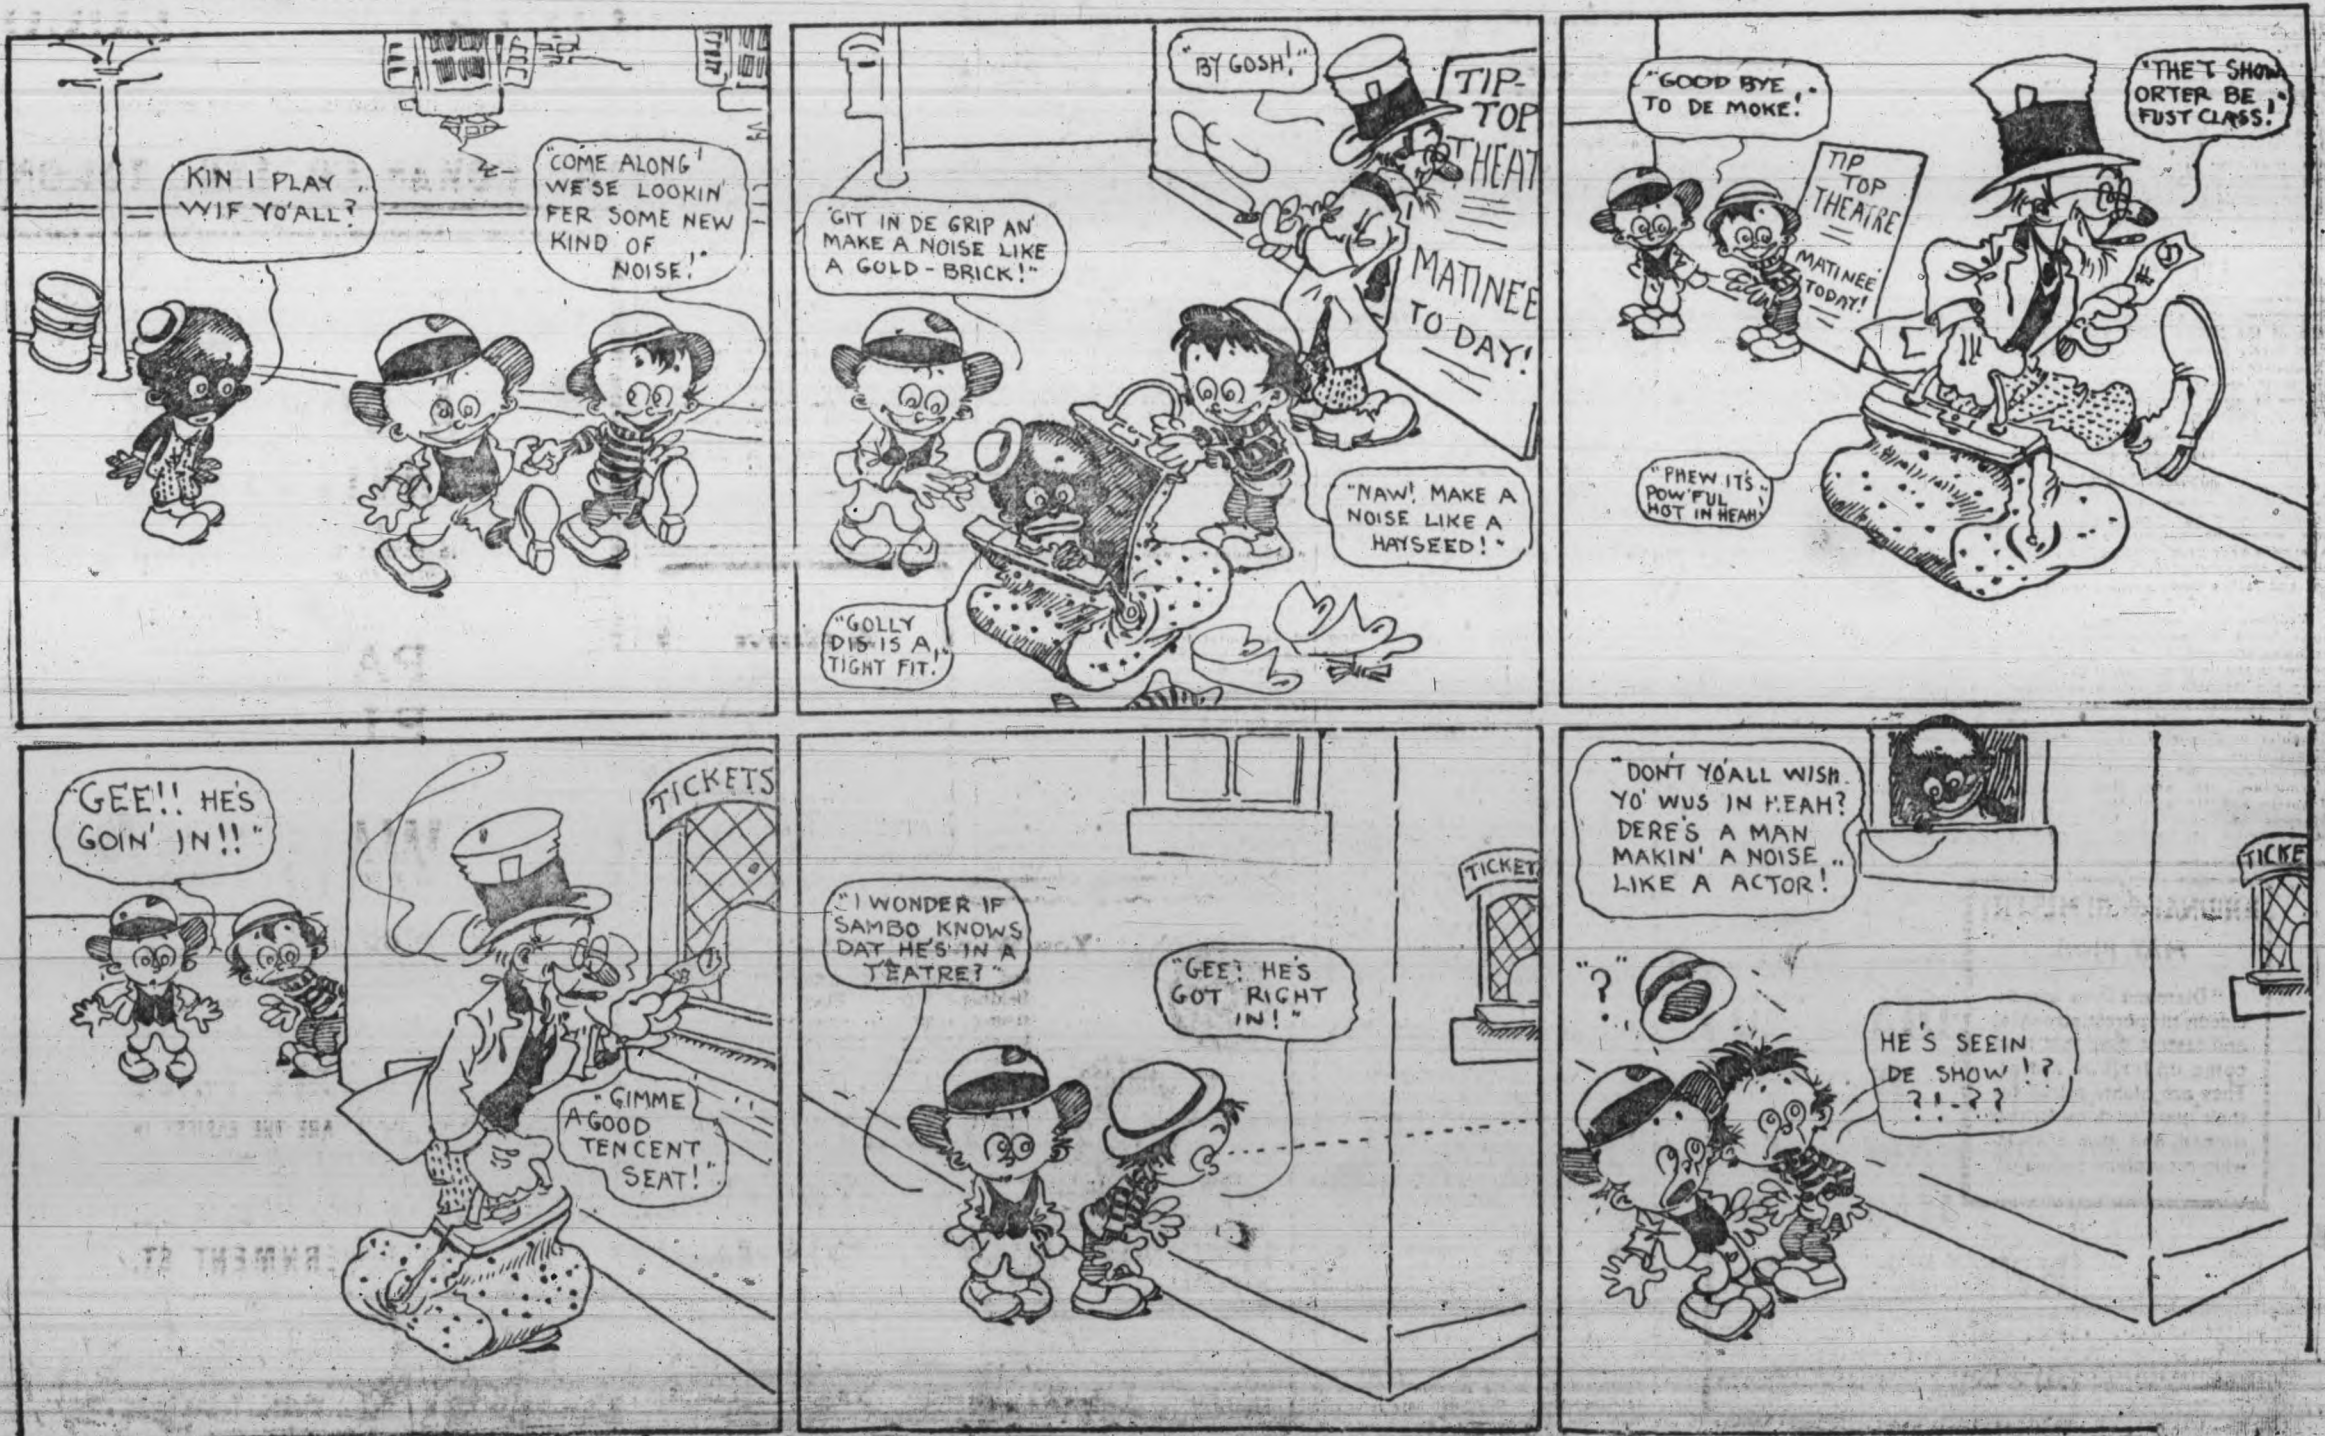

TEETHING WITHOUT TEARS.

Mothers who have suffered the misery of restless nights at teething time, and watched their babies in the unhelped agony of that period, will welcome the safe and certain relief that Baby's Own Tablets bring. Mrs. W. G. Mangle, Yorkton, N. W., says: "When my little one was cutting her teeth she suffered a great deal. Her gums were swollen and inflamed, and she was cross and restless. I got a box of Baby's Own Tablets, and after starting their use she began to improve at once, and her teeth came through almost painlessly. The Tablets are truly baby's friend." This medicine is guaranteed to contain no poisonous opiate or harmful drug. It cures all the minor ailments of little ones and may safely be given to a new-born child. Full directions with each box. Sold by all machine dealers or sent by mail at 25c a box by writing "The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

Appropos of the King's recent visit to Maribad Tree that the Austrian papers tell of the "hundreds of distinguished Englishmen, who saw themselves in the eyes of the King's favor, the enchantingly lovely ladies of English highlife, exquisitely dressed, who during the day are to be seen at the Brunnen like a chorus of stars surrounding the sun." The place is full of tall, who look about armed with kodaks and note books, and thus chronicle every minute detail of the King's sojourn. Nearly all the women wear lingerie frocks—simple, in the mornings, covered with hand embroidered tucks and lace at night. Not only Americans, but also French and Austrians have been wearing the colored chiffon hem-stitched veils, shrouding the hat and falling down yards behind.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

Well-Known Parliamentarians Now in Vi-litoria Renowned Old Acquaintances.

Messrs. Hance James Logan, LL.B., M.P.

for Cumberland, N. S., and A. E. Dymott,

M. P. for Algoma East, are in the city, where they are well known to some of Victoria's leading citizens. Mr. Logan is a baronet (entering the high school of his country of the Nova Scotia bench. He was the first Liberal elected to parliament from Cumberland. Mr. Dymott is a lumber manufacturer of Barrie, and one of the most popular men in that flourishing community. The two noted visitors were entertained to dinner by a number of their friends last night, and the occasion did credit to Victoria's empire-wide reputation for hospitality.

The Cowichan annual agricultural fair is in progress at Victoria. In Duncan, in splendid weather, and with a very large attendance of visitors.

James Strachan, an old Victoria boy, now a student pastor of Thornbury Baptist church, Ontario, is home visiting his mother. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he will occupy the pulpit of Calvary Baptist church tomorrow morning and evening.

ACAPULCO SOLD TO

SATISFY CLAIMS

THE VESSEL BROUGHT

THOUSAND DOLLARS

Direct Sighted in the Northern Pacific—The Life Raft at Carmanah Point.

At noon to-day, under order of the Admiralty, the schooner Acapulco was sold at public auction by Hinkson

Siddall, marshal of that court. The schooner realized $1,000. P. R. Brown, real estate agent on Broad street, was the purchaser. His bid was the only one received from the crowd which had gathered to attend the sale. There were several shipping men in the party, but the schooner was something which they seemingly did not want.

The Acapulco was put up for sale to satisfy the claims of six of her crew, which were as follows: Chas. Croft,

$275.00; Samuel Smith, $183.30; Charles

Walker, $265.10; Peter Bishop, $214.20;

Frank Chausin, $50.25.

The auction received for the schooner hardly meets the wages of these men, but the sale will free the vessel of any claim that might have been laid against her because of her past misdoings, and once registered under a new flag she will again become good property. It was to take out Canadian registration her owner would have to pay 25 per cent duty, but if she is taken in the American side she will be exempt from all charges of this kind, for she was there built and operated for many years as a lumber carrier.

P. Wilson, of San Francisco, who has been in the city for some time looking after the business of the vessel, will now leave for home. He said that the sale would clear the vessel. She might now, he added, be taken to the American side, but he was not sure what was to be done with her.

According to the San Francisco Examiner, "four men who were indicted on charges of conspiracy to commit an offence against the government in fitting out the schooner Jennie Thelin, or the Carmichael, as she has been known since she registered at Astoria, for a sealing expedition, will have to stand trial. Wednesday morning Judge

De Haven overruled the demurrer which was filed in the case, and H. J. Tyson,

W. J. Woodside, W. J. Wood and S. E.

R. de Smith are charged with being parties to the fitting out of the Carmichael for a sealing voyage to Behring Sea.

Judge De Haven overruled the demurrer without remark, and the defendants will have to answer to the indictment."
